

City Officials Figuring the Percentages

BY HUGH REYNOLDS

City officials are currently figuring percentages in an effort to increase tax revenues without driving property owners to the poorhouse.

Kingston now assesses at 37 per cent of full valuation and fixes a tax rate (for 1968) of $83.66 per thousand. The plan now under serious discussion calls for doubling the percentage of full valuation to 75 per cent and halving the tax rate to around $40 per thousand.

It has been emphasized that this fiscal maneuver would affect a very small minority of taxpayers, about five per cent.

The vast majority would pay basically the same tax as they do now.

The idea is to pick up some of the revenue now lost on G.I. exemptions which totaled $2,820,000 in real property last year. The plan, which could not go into effect before 1970, is expected to net the city another $80,000 in revenue.

In an effort to answer the many questions about the plan, city officials offered the following explanation today, using a figure of $10,000 full property value:

Under the current plan the $10,000 property is assessed at 37 per cent of value, giving a figure of $3,700. This is then multiplied by the tax rate ($83.66) to come up with a tax bill of approximately $310.

The tax would remain basically the same under the new plan, however, G.I.'s would be affected.

Not all veterans claim the exemption but it can go as high as $5,000 which is subtracted from the value of the property.

In the case of the $10,000 property using the 37 per cent figure, the G.I. pays taxes on $3,700. However, with his $5,000 exemption (if he has the full exemption) he pays nothing.

With the new plan, he would be paying taxes on 75 per cent of the $10,000, or $7,500. Figuring his full G.I. exemption, the city has $2,500 it can tax at the new rate of approximately $40. Thus the city derives $100, where it formerly had nothing.

The picking up of G.I. exemption by the city is only a part of a wide-scale plan to increase revenues. Mayor Raymond W. Garraghan sent a communication to the Common Council this month asking for the appointment of a committee on reassessments. That was referred to the Laws and Rules Committee, chaired by Edward Norton (D-Seventh Ward).

The city was last assessed in 1956 by Mayor Frederick Stang but these figures are now considered seriously outdated. The cost of a reassessment has been estimated at $100,000.

Garraghan is also pushing for a county-wide reappraisal and tax map by the legislature. It is felt by some city officials that certain sections of the county are not paying their fair share toward the cost of county government.

Kingston pays about one-third toward the cost of county government, reflected by the $29.16 tax rate per thousand for the county in the city budget this year.

The city figures the best way to drive this county levy down would be a county sales tax.

Kingston currently has its own sales tax which is expected to derive about $325,000 in revenue, or slightly more than $8 per thousand.

Estimates by Garraghan on a three per cent county sales tax range to over $7,000,000 per year, almost the entire amount the county has to currently raise by taxation. The city's share under a county sales tax could drop as low as $6 per thousand, a reduction of $23 from the current rate.

It is expected that the city would drop its two per cent sales tax if the county should adopt its own sales tax, hopefully by September.

A meeting is scheduled to night at 9 p. m. in the city clerk's office to discuss the city sales tax between the aldermen and the businessmen, the latter led by Frank Reis of the Central Broadway Businessmen's Association and Stanley London of the Uptown Businessmen's Association.

Also on tap for the aldermen is a meeting requested by Garraghan with his city treasurer, Stan Petro, assessor, Mathias Richardson, building inspector, George Radcliffe and former treasurer and current legislator, Orrie Riehl. That one is being scheduled for July 17 in the mayor's office. The department heads will brief the aldermen on Garraghan's plans on assessments.

Dutchess Crash Kills Boy

By WALTER S. CLARK

A 15-year-old New York City boy was killed and three other persons were injured, one critically, early today when the car in which they were riding went out of control on Route 199 in the Town of Pine Plains and crashed into a culvert and trees.

Stolen Car Involved

Dutchess County Sheriff Sergeant Hugh Brennan said the 1964 sedan involved in the mishap at 1:25 a. m. had been reported stolen in New York City on June 27. Authorities in that city were notified the vehicle had been recovered.

Brennan said the operator of the car, Louis A. Lopez, 23, of 14 Jackson Street, New York City, would be charged with criminal negligence in the operation of a motor vehicle resulting in the death of John Peter Baladejo, of 6264 Forsythe Street, New York City.

Investigators from the office of Sheriff Lawrence M. Quinlan said the 15-year-old had been riding in the back seat of the car and the impact after the crash hurled him through the windshield. He was pronounced dead at the scene by Dr. Michael Badeen, an assistant Dutchess County medical examiner, who said the boy died of a fractured skull and broken neck.

The body was removed to the Peck and Peck Funeral Home in Pine Plains.

Frank See, 19, of 118 Horeb Road, Warren, N. J., a passenger in the car, suffered a fracture of the left ankle, broken right arm, multiple lacerations of the face and possible internal injuries. He was reported in critical condition at Vassar Hospital in Poughkeepsie where he was placed in the intensive care unit. It was reported that surgeons were endeavoring to save the youth's right leg.

Also injured in the accident was Wayne Tsetse, 19, of 172 Forsythe Street, New York City. He sustained multiple lacerations, contusions, possible internal injuries and a cerebral concussion.

Dug-in Marines Vow to Remain Until Foe Beaten

By JACK WALSH

SAIGON (UPI)—For the fifth day U.S. Marines today clung to a northern border hill they were supposed to abandon. The Leathernecks have killed at least 300 attacking North Vietnamese and vowed to stay until they kill the rest of the attackers.

"We are going to move off this hill but not until we have defeated the North Vietnamese," said Maj. Gen. Raymond Davis, commander of the 3rd Marine Division which has about 1,000 men atop hill 689.

UPI correspondent Raymond Wilkinson, with the Leathernecks on the jungle mountain just below North Vietnam, reported one charge brought Communist troops surging through the Marine barbed wire.

"The gooks jumped into our trench lines. But we took some antitank weapons and blew them out," Lt. Larry Perry of Dallas, Tex., told Wilkinson. "We set up a hasty defense position and beat them back. But we killed at least 16 in our own trenches."

Elated by a successful weekend summit meeting in Central America, President Lyndon B. Johnson relaxed today at his Texas ranch while preparing for a trip to the Pacific to talk the problems of war and peace with South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu.

Hill 689—named for its height in meters (2,230 feet)—overlooks Khe Sanh, the fort which the Marines abandoned five days ago in order to give themselves more maneuverability. The North Vietnamese surged toward the hill 689 outpost, apparently sensing an easy capture of the American outpost they had never been able to budge.

Davis had about 200 Marines atop the height. He sent in about 800 more men. The North Vietnamese began a mortar and rocket barrage and charged. Since Friday they have been charging and the Marines have been cutting them down.

The battle of hill 689 formed one part of a brawl spread along just below the North Vietnam Demilitarized Zone (DMZ). Demonstrating their greater mobility, Marine forces were sweeping the area, blocking Communist infiltration routes and killing another 230 Red troops.

In other developments:

—In the Saigon area, where allied commanders have predicted a major Communist assault, U.S. troops killed 21 guerrillas Monday. B52 Stratofortresses continued pounding Viet Cong positions. U.S. Navy patrol boats sank three guerrilla supply sampans.

—U.S. jets flew 140 missions Monday against North Vietnam's southern panhandle supply lines. Communist gunfire downed an Air Force F4C Phantom but a helicopter safely rescued the two crewmen who had parachuted.

—South Vietnam spokesmen said 293 of their troops were killed and 597 wounded in action last week. They said South Vietnamese forces killed 482 Communists last week. In the same period, they said 1,174 Communist rocket and mortar rounds were seized near Saigon.

Viet Cong guerrillas sprayed a nauseating type gas around a government outpost in the Mekong Delta at nightfall Monday and pressed an attack that dealt its militiamen defenders "moderate" casualties, military spokesmen said today.

South Vietnamese soldiers, four of them vomiting blood and many others nauseated, beat off the assault on the Ong De outpost, 58 miles southwest of Saigon in the delta, the announcement said.

Communist losses were not given. The term "moderate" casualties meant any more government losses would have seriously endangered the defense of the small outpost.

GUNS—Celler Makes Move

WASHINGTON (AP) —

A said, "I'm anxious to get a rule on this bill," by which he meant he wanted the proposal in mail-order sales sent to the House floor.

He went on: "In order to get a rule, I'm willing to oppose any amendment offered on the floor of the House dealing with registration and licensing. In conference, I will oppose any attempt to add registration as an amendment to this bill."

President Johnson had proposed to Congress that the ban on the mail-order sale of pistols contained in the recently passed omnibus crime bill be extended to rifles and shotguns. He also asked for the registration of all guns and the licensing of their owners.

Celler was joined by Rep. William M. McCulloch of Ohio, ranking Republican on the Judiciary Committee in opposing the registration bill.

McCulloch said he would oppose the registration bill "without qualification. I am fearful that registration legislation at this time would endanger this bill."

He also told the committee he would not have made such a statement "had not I felt that the overwhelming majority if not all the minority felt that way," referring to the Republican members of the judiciary committee.

Several members of the rules committee indicated they could vote for a ban on sales but would oppose the registration of firearms.

Celler and McCulloch would be part of the House team to iron out any differences in House-Senate conference in bills passed by the two bodies.

If opposed to any measure they could prevent any agreement between the House and the Senate.

Chairman William M. Colmer of the House Rules Committee said he expected a bill banning the interstate sales of firearms to pass the House but he believed it would be weakened by amendments from the floor.

He said many such amendments had been suggested during the hearing of his committee which lasted some six hours Monday, even though the meeting was broken up often by roll call votes on the floor.

Several witnesses appearing before Colmer's committee opposed giving the measure a rule which would prevent it from reaching the floor.

In the Senate Monday, Atty. Gen. Ramsey Clark testified before the juvenile delinquency subcommittee and said "the ghost of abolition" provides no excuse for failing to pass firearms registration and licensing legislation.

Clark said he knows of no responsible group advocating complete abolition of private ownership of firearms.

The parent Senate Judiciary Committee is to take up the gun control question Wednesday. The committee scheduled the meeting two weeks ago after it bogged down in debate over whether to tack registration and licensing to a mail order ban on long guns and ammunition—a dilemma similar to that confronting the House Rules Committee.

Southern Ulster Highways On the Legislature Agenda

BY ALBERT J. CAWEIN

A six-point state highway improvement study, regulation and control of billboards, stronger penalties for littering and a county recreation commission will be among the major items on the agenda of the County Legislature Thursday night.

The widening, improvement or reconstruction of six major state highways in southern Ulster County and the construction of a new Thruway interchange in the Town of Plattekill has been proposed in a resolution to be introduced by Joseph Martorana, R-9th District.

Study Conditions

Legislator Martorana's resolution calls for a study of current conditions of all state highways and systems in the county with the aim of making recommendations for improvements to the state. These recommendations, Martorana noted, should be included in the state-wide comprehensive transportation plan which the state commissioner of transportation is developing.

Martorana cites the need for improvement in the area which he represents including the Towns of Lloyd, Marlboro, Plattekill and Shawangunk. He lists six major sections which he recommends should be widened and improved including resurfacing and reconstruction where necessary to eliminate hazardous curves.

They include Route 44-55 from Route 9W in Highland west to the Shawangunk Mountains; Route 9W from north of Highland, south through Highland and Marlboro to the Orange County line; Route 299 from Route 9W north of Highland, west to the State Thruway interchange at New Paltz, widening to four lanes; Route 32 from Modena north to New Paltz; Route 208 from the junction of Routes 203 and 300, south through Walkkill to the Orange line and Route 52 from Pine Bush, west through Walker Valley to Route 209 in Ellenville.

The resolution also cites the need for an additional Thruway interchange in the Town of Plattekill, either at the crossing of Route 32 or at the Route 44-55 crossing in Ardonia. This is midway between the Newburgh and New Paltz interchanges. As this is an east-west artery it will meet the needs of the driving public and add tremendously to the economy and growth of southern Ulster County, the legislator said.

The resolution also calls for a study to be made for all areas by the Bridge and Highway Committee and suggests the committee work with county and local elected officials and further submit its findings to the County Legislature for ultimate recommendations to the state.

Minority Leader Roger W. Mabie, D-7th District, will introduce a resolution suggesting an increase in the fine for littering up to $250 for each offense. The proposal urges all law enforcement officials at every level to make a concerted drive to punish offenders.

His resolution cites the wasteful effort made by county highway departments to collect litter. He notes that Ulster County Highway Department picked up 206 truck loads of trash along county roads recently and Town of Esopus Highway Department has collected 79 truck loads along town roads.

Legislator William R. West, R-Woodstock will offer a resolution which directs a study by the Ulster County Planning Board for a means of regulating billboards in the county and to report its findings to the legislative body.

Asks Cooperation

The resolution would have the legislators recommend to all candidates in the 1968 election to avoid use of outdoor posters and billboards. West asks individual members of the Legislature to discuss with their political leaders at all levels, mutual banning of outdoor posters and billboards in this and future elections. In the resolution Legislator West cites the beauty of the area and how it is marred by posters on trees, utility poles, fences and billboards.

A proposal by Legislators Melvin Mones, R-Kingston and Lester C. Elmendorf, R-2nd District, calls for the establishment of a County Recreation and Parks Commission to utilize the excellent properties in the county suitable for recreation purposes. The resolution asks that the commission investigate and study all feasible sites that may be utilized for all forms of recreation and determine this which may be developed. The commission would also make inquiries as to state and federal grants available to counties for recreation purposes.

Ray Appeal to Be Heard

LONDON (UPI)—A British court said today it will hear James Earl Ray's appeal against extradition to the United States to stand trial for the slaying of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., on July 29.

The surprise announcement was made when Ray appeared at Bow Street Magistrate's Court on charges of violating British gun and immigration laws.

The announcement on the extradition appeal had been unexpected as the appearance today was supposed to deal only with the gun and passport charges.

Egypt, Israel Trade Shots

CAIRO (UPI)—Israel and Egypt duelled with artillery across the southern tip of the Suez Canal Monday in the longest cross-canal exchange in nine months, Egyptian military spokesmen said today.

The 2½ hour exchange began when Israel opened fire on the city of Suez, wounding several civilians, damaging houses and setting fires, the Egyptians said.

Returning the fire, Egypt's guns inflicted heavy casualties on the Israelis and destroyed five Israeli tanks, two artillery observation posts and one ammunition dump, the spokesman said.

Book Causes Trial Delay

DETROIT (AP)—A criminal court judge in Detroit sharply rapped a recently published book Monday and agreed to delay the murder trial of a white Detroit policeman accused of slaying a Negro youth during last July's riot.

Judge Robert Colombo said from the bench he thought John Hersey's "The Algiers Motel Incident," published last month, was "designed to deliberately be released at a time that would prevent a fair and impartial trial in this case."

CROWN POINT, N. Y. (AP)—A 13-year-old boy was killed Monday when struck by a Delaware and Hudson train after he and a companion had tried to retrieve fishing poles left on a railroad trestle near this village beside Lake Champlain.

State Police said Robert B. Williams of Crown Point tripped over a pet dog running beside him on the trestle.

The companion, John J. Landry, also 13 and of Crown Point, was not injured.

NAAACP to Act On Any Bias

By HUGH REYNOLDS
The NAACP will forward a resolution through Alderman Joseph Epstein (D Sixth Ward) asking the Common Council to give the mayor the power to cancel municipal building contracts when discriminatory practices are proven.

Action was taken at last night's meeting of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People at New Central Baptist Church on the Strand.

Everett Hodge, president, said such laws are in effect in New Rochelle and New York City. He added that he has met with officials from the Department of Housing and Urban Development who assured him that federal funds would be held up in the event of discrimination against anyone for race, color or creed.

The group is also drafting a proposal to the Building Trades Council which comprises carpenters, masons, plumbers and electricians calling for on the job training programs for Negroes.

Hodge said, "Unions have prevented many Negroes from joining and now they must pay the price." It was noted that the NAACP could act most effectively on construction projects financed wholly or in part with federal and state funds.

The Kingston Area Chamber of Commerce received the approval of the group for its plan to spend $10,000 for two men to establish a job program for the underprivileged. A communication from the Chamber was read stating that 12 persons from the low-income sector of the community have been employed under the Chamber's job program.

Negro youth was also discussed in some detail with Hodge asking for a meeting with Negro clergy and the NAACP in an effort to establish better lines of communication between the youth and their elders.

Discrimination in local restaurants against Negroes was also discussed with the group agreeing that any complaints should be carefully checked out either through the NAACP or the Kingston Human Relations Commission. Irving Bell is the chairman of the commission and is also a member of the NAACP Executive Board.

Fish Hammers On Crime Issue

"No wonder by opponent shouts 'political baloney' in response to my remarks on the subject of crime," Hamilton Fish Jr. told the Schoharie County Republican Committee. "Every Democrat office holder and candidate is extremely vulnerable on this issue."

"Crime has increased at an all-time high rate during the Kennedy-Johnson administration," Fish, who is the Republican candidate for Congress in the 28th District, pointed out that Johnson's own justice department said that crime had increased 88 per cent in the last seven years.

"This is absolutely intolerable," said Fish "especially as compared with the first seven years of the Eisenhower administration when there was an increase of only 43 per cent - less than half of the increase under the Democrat administration."

Fish suggested that his opponent stop "his irresponsible name calling and stop playing fast and loose with the facts."

"The real facts are that under Republicans there was less crime and also a much smaller increase in crime," Fish concluded.

Onteora Meeting On School Petition

The Onteora Citizens Committee will meet tonight at 8 in the Parish Hall, St. Francis de Sales Church, Phoenixia, to consider petitioning the Onteora Board of Education to take the necessary steps to do away with its recently invoked austerity budget.

Onteora voters, twice in recent months, turned down other proposed budgets.

Under an austerity program certain services are necessarily curtailed according to the state education law. Some bus transportation, cafeteria service, book purchases as well as some other instructional and custodial equipment will be deleted from the program.

The only way any service may be restored would be to bring the austerity budget before the voting public with options or vote an entirely new budget.

Before the last budget vote in June, the citizen's committee urged area residents to vote "yes."

The presently adopted austerity budget is $3,750,000, down $167,000 from the original budget proposed in May.

The Onteora Board, at a re-organizational meeting July 2, instituted the austerity budget and did not set a date for further voting.

Dr. Harold Snyder, superintendent of schools, commented after the last defeat, that only five per cent put the measure down.

Pitchfork Attacker Is Sought

Attacked by a bearded long haired man with a pitchfork after he surprised the intruder in a bathhouse on the property of Lomala Corp. in the Dutchess County community of Hopewell Junction at 8:30 p. m. Monday, Vernon Lindblom, 63, was seriously injured.

Fishkill State police sent out all-state alarms on the teletype seeking the apprehension of the assailant of Lindblom, who was admitted to Highland Hospital in Beacon suffering a broken right clavicle and lacerations of the ears.

Troopers described the much-sought man as white male, about 30 to 40 years of age, six feet tall, medium build. He has long black hair and a heavy beard. The suspect was wearing greenish clothes.

Lindblom told BCI officers of the Fishkill State police that he went to the bathhouse on the Lomala property to check the building. As he opened an interior door he was accosted by the man who slugged him with the pitchfork and then fled on foot.

Troopers reported the man was carrying a knapsack and other clothing and he took the pitchfork with him when he disappeared. Troopers requested the public to immediately notify Fishkill State Police if the fugitive is seen. Authorities said residents of Hopewell Junction had reported they had seen the man in the area on Sunday and Monday.

Surrenders

Carrying his 12-week-old son, Leslie Wallace Mellish and his bride, Beryl, 19, leave their besieged home in Sydney, Australia in the company of Police Chief Norman Allen, and Police Supt. Don Fergusson. Mellish, a 23-year-old ex-convict, had kept 70 policemen at bay eight days while holding his bride and son as hostages. He had previously agreed to surrender if allowed to marry Beryl but the siege continued after the wedding. After surrendering, Mellish said he wanted to fight in Vietnam. (UPI CABLEPHOTO.)

Gunman Gives Up After Eight Days

SYDNEY, Australia (UPI)—A young gunman who kept 70 police at bay for eight days today surrendered, marching from the siege house with the teen-aged bride and baby he held hostage. Wallace "Wally" Mellish announced he wants to fight in Vietnam.

"They should have left him in the asylum," said Wally's mother. But Police Chief Norman Allen of New South Wales smiled as he led Mellish, 23, his shotgun bride Beryl, 19, and 12-week-old Leslie across a lawn cut by riot squad foxholes. Allen had been criticized for agreeing to the gunman's threat of mass murder—to witness Wally's marriage to Beryl and supplying him with an armor-piercing M16 automatic rifle.

The chief's tactics of pacifying Mellish paid off when Wally telephoned Sydney Radio Station WSM and broadcast that he would surrender if given a medical examination at the Australian army recruiting office.

Wally had promised at the outset of the siege—he chased away two warrant servers—to surrender if allowed to marry Beryl. Allen had agreed and then Wally demanded 90 minutes with his bride and Allan had again agreed. Then Wally demanded a one-night honeymoon in the siege cottage and Allan agreed. But, although the chief had supplied Coca-Cola and chocolate cookies for the wedding and himself as witness, the gunman still refused to surrender.

When Allan went back into the house to plead for surrender, Wally demanded and got the M16 rifle plus 200 bullets and threatened once more to

Sirhan Is Moved To New Building

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Sirhan Bishara Sirhan has been secretly whisked to a cell in the Hall of Justice, where he will face trial on charges of murdering Sen. Robert F. Kennedy.

A convoy of patrol cars manned by seven deputies from the Central Jail, completed the move Sunday. Sheriff Peter J. Pitchess announced Monday. The 14-minute move was so secret not even Russell E. Parsons, Sirhan's attorney, knew about it.

"We knew it was coming," said one of Parson's aides, "but the time was a secret even from us." "The transfer was accomplished in a routine manner and was part of an over-all previously scheduled program of security for the inmate," Pitchess said.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (UPI)—President Johnson, elated by a successful weekend summit meeting and by greeting from wildly cheering crowds as he hedge-hopped his way home through Central America, relaxed today at his Texas ranch before flying to Washington tonight.

But around his preparations began for another trip, this one to the Pacific to talk the problems of war and peace with South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu.

Johnson stopped at the LBJ Ranch for a brief respite after an exhilarating 5,900 mile safari topping off a visit to San Salvador.

The President gave the presidents of Nicaragua, Costa Rica, Honduras and Guatemala a ride home on the presidential jet and made ceremonial calls at their countries' airports. Thousands showed up at the guarded airports to welcome Johnson with homemade signs, American flags and festive music.

In business at home the President today planned to send the Senate a message from the ranch urging early ratification of the United Nations treaty to ban the spread of nuclear weapons.

Rusk to Testify
Johnson's message coincided with an appearance by Secretary of State Dean Rusk before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

Johnson signed the treaty July 1 and made a dramatic announcement of forthcoming exchanges with the Soviet Union on limitation and cutback of offensive and defensive rockets.

The Texas White House also said arrangements were being made with the Thieu government to set a place and time for the Pacific meeting.

Honolulu, American Samoa and Manila have been mentioned as possible sites. The two presidents were expected to meet within the next two weeks. The White House aides were letting the announcements come from Saigon, but Johnson apparently had been getting ready for the meeting for some time.

Calls for Meeting
Thieu, who canceled a state visit to Washington in favor of the Pacific summit, said there were many problems, including the Paris peace talks and the stepped up Communist offensive in Vietnam, that called for an exchange of views between the presidents.

Johnson, tanned and jovial, was all smiles as he finished up his Central American tour. The people turned out in droves to see Johnson. It was the first time a president of the United States had visited several of the countries, and national holidays were proclaimed in some for Johnson's appearance.

At all stops Johnson stressed hopes for regional economic and political unity among Central American states.

Fiscal 1969 Bows Tardily

As fiscal 1969 began at midnight last Sunday, only one of the 13 money bills necessary for the operation of the United States government had passed the House. The House Appropriations Committee had completed work on eight more. Four others awaited authorization legislation. So far behind was this schedule, that the House approved a resolution permitting Federal agencies to continue spending, else the wheels of government would have stalled.

The main reason for this wait and see game is that Congress does not want to make cuts of $6 billion in spending which it ordered as the price of the 10 per cent income tax surtax it had just voted. Among those bills still to come are money bills for defense, foreign aid, military construction and the District of Columbia, totaling more than $85 billion in new spending requests.

The Appropriation Committee reported that House action on money bills so far had cut spending by nearly $2 billion. The Senate may restore some of the cuts. What spending cuts the Congress does not make, the President must under the tax and spending legislation.

However, Rep. Thomas B. Curtis, Missouri Republican, told the House that he was persuaded by White House statements that President Johnson has no intention of cutting spending in the fiscal year just started. "Possibly impeachment proceedings are the only way to bring the President in line," Curtis said.

No one believes that it will come to that. The road block is in spending for the poor. Congress does not want to touch it, and the President has shown no desire to do so either. Rep. George H. Mahon, chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, points out that the Federal Government spent $25 billion to help the poor in the last fiscal year and will spend $26 billion to $27 billion for this purpose in the new fiscal year. It is political dynamite to cut that.

Money is going to flow through Congress by billions when it returns Wednesday after the holiday, so that the Government can function. We'll see who will cut that $6 billion, Congress or the President, or if Curtis is right, neither.

LSD Users Run Scared

If throwing a scare into the public hasn't made much of a dent in the nation's tobacco habit as yet, the tactic appears to have had sudden and dramatic effect in another area of considerable concern in health quarters.

The U.S. Bureau of Narcotics reports a sharp decline in LSD usage in the wake of revelations during the past year of the mind-bending drug's effect on human reproduction—which probably says something about survival of the race being a more telling argument than personal survival.

The bureau says the turning point came with evidence that LSD can disrupt the arrangement of chromosomes—the tiny rods in cells containing the multitudes of genes determining human development from sex to hair color and number of fingers.

The reports of medical researchers and of actual abnormal birth "scared the pants off" of many taking LSD for kicks or to be in, the bureau believes, with a resulting "substantial" usage decline in recent months.

Victory is not total. There are still many hard-core addicts and many former users, primarily the collegiate set, may simply have turned to marijuana. But every little bit helps.

Newspapers, by widely reporting the chromosome peril, are given considerable credit for LSD's downfall.

Who says there isn't good news to report—or that reporting bad news can't have beneficial results?

On the Plus Side

Next time you start worrying about the younger generation let these facts come into your mind.

In what is becoming a spring tradition in California, 80,000 high school graduates held all-night frolics at Disneyland this year. Five nights the park was thronged from 11 p.m. until 5 a.m. by classes from a total of 308 schools.

While Disneyland makes it plain to the kids that they'll stand for no nonsense, officials in charge say they have less trouble with them than they have with some adults.

Ralph Nader, the safety advocate, charged the Department of Interior with footdragging in eliminating hazards in mining. To Secretary Stewart Udall's answer, that hundreds of closure orders to correct unsafe conditions have been handed down in recent years, Nader said there have been hundreds of thousands of violations of advisory codes because they did not have the force of law.

"It'll Never Get Off the Ground!"

David Lawrence Says

Why Hasn't Warren Given Definite Date?

WASHINGTON — Many questions were left unanswered by the extraordinary interview which Chief Justice Earl Warren granted to the press last Friday. Although justices of the highest court in the land are not supposed to talk politics, Mr. Warren himself refused to answer some questions in that category, he nevertheless took occasion to express his opinion publicly on the merits of the two candidates for the Supreme Court selected by President Johnson. This comes at a time when a distinctly political controversy is going on in the Senate of the United States with respect to those same appointments.

Already several members of the Senate have ascribed political motives to Chief Justice Warren for submitting his letter of retirement at this time, instead of waiting until a new president has been inaugurated next January.

Certainly the Senate Committee on the judiciary hasn't had the chance as yet to consider whether Justice Fortas and Judge Thornberry—who have announced as probable nominees for the vacancies when they do occur—should or should not be appointed. Nor has there been any opportunity for the other justices of the high court to express themselves. Indeed, it is most unusual for a member of the court to venture to evaluate publicly any prospective nominees to the bench.

So it was surprising that Chief Justice Warren volunteered a comment on the possible appointment of Justice Fortas for Chief Justice. He spoke favorably of him, as having a good record as a lawyer and as having served on the high court for three years, then added: "I can't imagine a better background for a Chief Justice than that."

But there are other Associate Justices now on the high court who have served a longer period than Mr. Fortas. They come from both political parties. Did they not deserve consideration?

There is, for instance, Justice Byron White, who at 51 has served six years on the court. Potter Stewart is 53 and has been an Associate Justice for nine years, while William J. Brennan Jr., 62, has been on the Supreme Court for 11 years. William O. Douglas has been an Associate Justice for 29 years, and John M. Harlan has served 14 years. Both are 69 years of age.

Thus each of these men is at least eight years younger than Chief Justice Warren and has served at least three years longer on the Supreme Court than Mr. Fortas. Also, Mr. Fortas is five years older than Justice Stewart and seven years older than Justice White.

It isn't clear either just why

Chief Justice Warren hasn't given a definite date for his retirement and has preferred instead to leave the question open so that he may stay in office if the Senate fails to confirm the men who now are being considered for the two posts. In fact, Mr. Warren intimates that he could continue indefinitely as Chief Justice if the President and the Senate carry on a prolonged controversy about confirming Messrs. Fortas and Thornberry.

It now is being asked whether the Senate Judiciary Committee will have the opportunity to elicit from members of the bar their opinions as to the qualifications of other men on the bench who might be chosen in the event that the two nominations presented by President Johnson are voted down or eliminated by a filibuster.

The inadequacy of the present system is illustrated by the fact that the President of the United States can appoint one of his closest friends to be Chief Justice of the United States without any opportunity being afforded for consideration of other judges who may have been much better qualified for the post. The real question is whether the American people are entitled to have the ablest persons as Chief Justice and Associate Justices, instead of being compelled to accept the political cronies of a President who in a few months is to leave the White House.

Thanks largely to Spain's Latin-American support, she was finally admitted to full United Nations membership in 1955. But at the dangerous insistence of Denmark, Holland, Norway and the powerful Communist party in Italy, the NATO opponents of Spain's entrance prefer a dislike for Francisco Franco to the protection of their own countries.

Conversely, within Spain, Franco's proudest boast—"We were the first European nation to fight communism, and to win"—still profitably identifies him among countless millions. This combines with his profit as the man who kept the people out of World War II.

Many Spaniards want internal changes. The list includes land reform, education reform, anti-monopoly measures, press freedoms and more freedoms for workers to organize, better wages and lower living costs.

A wise Spaniard once called his native land a dulce anarquia—a gentle anarchy. The surface is sometimes calm, deceptively so, but the normal Spaniard is everlastingly a conflict. It is, however, a compartmentalized country by ous young ones who think that a placard is a magic wand which should produce instant peace and instant good society, the late Bob Kennedy's questions are crushing.

Their assaults on the awesomely impersonal nature of modern government and business are at once hypocritical and a cop-out.

The large school lecture class, the huge corporation and big government have now been with us for decades. But within the inevitably impersonal framework of 20th-century industrial society, it has always been and it is now possible to live a highly individual, very personal life which has a real impact upon society without either shunning it, scorning it or trying to wreck it.

Indeed, there is impressive evidence that many young ones who rail against the impersonality of modern life are hiding behind it. How easy, for example, for a young American student radical to blame something called "international capitalism" for the near-starvation of 300,000 Brazilians, instead of helping town to Harlem to help 25 or 30 deprived Negro youngsters learn to read.

Modern society is made less impersonal only when individuals contrive constructively to have a highly personal effect upon it. Our massive "establishment" is not going to be brought down or made better by those who either cop out or try to destroy it.

The young who choose these paths are simply underscoring society's impersonality and leaving to others, for good or evil, the task of making it "personal" in some degree or other.

Drew Pearson Says Gun Bill Backers Muff Chance to Win Battle

WASHINGTON — Passage of laws for the American people sometimes turns on very little things. The other day the passage of a gun control bill turned on the fact that three Senators were not willing to spend a few extra minutes in the Senate Judiciary Committee. The gun control bill lost.

The Judiciary Committee was considering the Tydings gun control bill, which has the backing of men such as Sen. Mike Mansfield of Montana but the bitter opposition of the National Rifle Association. It provides that each state shall be given time to work out its own gun registration system before the federal government steps in. President Johnson favors a stronger bill requiring federal registration from the start.

Sponsoring the former bill along with Tydings were Sens. George Smathers, D-Fla., and Hugh Scott, R-Pa. Also strongly backing the bill was Sen. Ted Kennedy, D-Mass., brother of the two men who were victims of the assassin's bullet.

The Senate Judiciary Committee is strongly stacked with Southern fundamentalists and Republican vocalists for the gun lobby. They range from Big Jim Eastland of Mississippi to John McClellan of Arkansas and Sam Erwin of North Carolina, among the Southern fundamentalists, to Roman Hruska of Nebraska, the rootin', tootin' spokesman for the National Rifle Association who has been doing his best to delay any legislation. He figures that the longer the delay, the more the assassination of Bobby Kennedy in Los Angeles will be forgotten.

In between there are Quentin Burdick of North Dakota, the quiet spokesman for prairie pheasant game hunters, and Ed Long of Missouri, who has a hard time making up his mind on gun control.

When gun control was debated in the Judiciary Committee the other day, all these anti-control men were present. But three backers of the bill were not.

Sen. Tydings argued eloquently. He also used the telephone. Frantically he called two co-sponsors of the bill, Smathers of Florida and Scott of Pennsylvania. They said they would come for the vote. But somehow or other they never arrived.

Tydings also called Ted Kennedy, a member of the committee, who was passionately, tragically interested in gun control. Teddy wanted to be told a few minutes before the Judiciary Committee vote so he could get there at the last minute. But he never arrived.

The gun control bill, which it was hoped would discourage more assassinations such as those of President Kennedy, Sen. Robert Kennedy, and Martin Luther King, was stymied in committee by a 7 to 5 vote. If the three Senators who favored the legislation had taken the trouble to be present, the vote would have been the other way around.

Another vote is due in the Judiciary Committee this week. It will be interesting to see whether the three Senators this time are present.

This column may have been too optimistic when we reported on July 4 that the old era of Joe McCarthyism is no more.

Almost before that column was published, a telephone barrage similar to that operated by Richard Nixon's campaign managers when he first defeated Rep. Jerry Voorhes for Congress, was buzzing over the telephone lines in Washington. The Nixon technique, used both against Voorhes and later Helen Gahagan Douglas, was to charge them with being pro-communist.

The same technique, coupled with anti-Semitism, was used this time against Abe Fortas, to block his confirmation to the Supreme Court. Those who dialed 528-4357 listened to a message from the National Socialist White People's party pouring out a stream of anti-Semitic hate against Fortas.

"In this nation of 150 million white Aryans," said the telephone message, "it seems that Mr. Johnson couldn't find a single qualified person to fill that important post. Instead he dug up this despicable Jew with a red record that smells to high heaven, and what a record it is. Here are some of the highlights:

"Fortas was for a period associated with the National Lawyers Guild, a notorious communist front, cited by the Attorney General of the United States. He was publicly associated with the known Soviet agents Alger Hiss and Harry Dexter White.

"Fortas was instrumental in bringing about the Supreme Court school busing decision whereby millions of helpless white children are delivered each school day into the hands of young Negro hoodlums and rapists in thousands of blackboard jungles across the nation. It was Abe Fortas who cast the decisive fifth vote in the infamous Miranda vs. Arizona decision.

"There is too much in the Fortas record to list here. If you are a white American concerned about the growing anti-white trend in this country, contact the National Socialist White People's party.

"We need your support. This has been another in a continuing series of white power messages."

Note—The 18 GOP Senators in addition to Griffin are: Allott, Colo., Baker, Tenn., Bennett, Utah, Carlson, Kans., Cotton, N. H., Curtis, Neb., Fannin, Ariz., Fong, Hawaii, Hansen, Wyo., Jordan, Idaho, Miller, Iowa, Monroney, Ky., Mundt, S. D., Murphy, Calif., Thurmond, S. C., Tower, Tex., Williams, Del., and Young, N. D.

Henry J. Taylor Says NATO Allies Blackball Spain

Defense Secretary Clark M. Clifford wisely revived behind the scenes the question of Spain at the recent NATO meeting in Brussels. Including Spain in NATO has always been a strategic imperative, especially since President Charles de Gaulle withdrew France, but the country has been blackballed by internal European politics. Mr. Clifford could only make another sensible feeler, although Spain is no supplicant for this.

Thanks largely to Spain's Latin-American support, she was finally admitted to full United Nations membership in 1955. But at the dangerous insistence of Denmark, Holland, Norway and the powerful Communist party in Italy, the NATO opponents of Spain's entrance prefer a dislike for Francisco Franco to the protection of their own countries.

Conversely, within Spain, Franco's proudest boast—"We were the first European nation to fight communism, and to win"—still profitably identifies him among countless millions. This combines with his profit as the man who kept the people out of World War II.

Many Spaniards want internal changes. The list includes land reform, education reform, anti-monopoly measures, press freedoms and more freedoms for workers to organize, better wages and lower living costs.

A wise Spaniard once called his native land a dulce anarquia—a gentle anarchy. The surface is sometimes calm, deceptively so, but the normal Spaniard is everlastingly a conflict. It is, however, a compartmentalized country by nature in its provinces and the pressures are not unified.

The common denominators nationwide are the church and the army, both of which likewise want changes—but, like the overwhelming majority of Spaniards, only if the changes can come without violence. More than 1½ million Spaniards died in their last civil war. They are appalled at any thought of another.

An internally threatened Spain would probably rally behind Franco on no less surprising scale than France did behind de Gaulle.

Generalissimo Francisco Franco y Bahamonde, five feet three, now 76, only two years younger than de Gaulle, became in 1926 the youngest general in Western Europe at the age of 34.

Time, of course, is overtaking his survival. In fact, the cry, "Viva Franco—Arriba Spain," is now shortened to only "Arriba Spain" in government radio sign-offs.

You hear it widely said abroad, as about de Gaulle, especially among their hopeful enemies, that Franco is in bad health. There is no evidence whatever.

He has a notorious dislike of Madrid, and all urban centers. His power seat is the Palace of El Prado, 15 miles to the northwest, where I first interviewed him a full 25 years ago, the first interview he ever gave after the civil war. Also, Franco remains longer now at his Galacia villa on the winding coastal road to remote Meiras. But, like de Gaulle, he has an uncanny ability to play off attacking groups, ruin their positions, and emerge unscathed, and often even stronger. And he will note to you with some irony that in this country of fiery temperaments famous for its bull-ring call of "Mata! Mata!"—"Kill him! Kill him!"—he moves much more freely and exposed than does President Johnson in the United States.

Franco's claim to constitutional legitimacy rests on a national referendum of July, 1947. It "approved" in overwhelming majority his designation as lifelong ruler ("By the Grace of God, Caudillo of Spain"), the abolition of Spain's republican form of government, inherited from 1831, and the restoration of a monarchy—but without a king.

Spain is thus a constitutional monarchy, with Franco holding the power to designate a king to succeed him. But, like de Gaulle, Franco loves power. He is also in the traditional pattern of the Spanish general whose ambition is to save his country by becoming her ruler.

No, I think Franco will try to stay in command as long as he is alive and then be buried as chief of state at the incredible tomb complex called the Valley of the Fallen, with its great bronze doors of 11 tons each and its huge granite cross a football-field high, expressing the soul of Spain, beautiful and severe.

Meanwhile, the weakening result of our NATO allies blackball is the kind of luxury we can no longer afford while we pour our own people's billions of dollars into Europe's defense.

Flood of Foreign-Made Guns

By WILLIAM McGAFFIN
Chicago Daily News Service

WASHINGTON — Sen. Thomas J. Dodd (D-Conn.) has enlisted administration support to block importation of a flood of cheap, foreign-made guns.

Some domestic importers have stepped up their purchases in anticipation of the Dec. 16 deadline when import controls in the crime control law go into effect, the Senator reported.

From Jan. 1 to mid-June, he told President Johnson, the importers obtained licenses that could result in the importation of more than 1,300,000 firearms.

Since the crime control bill was signed, he continued, the importers have made requests for new import licenses which, if granted, could result in the importation of 300,000 firearms.

Altogether, Dodd estimated, more than 3,000,000 "dangerous, inexpensive, foreign-made and foreign military surplus firearms" could be due in the United States during the next six months.

THE LAST AMERICAN

by Don Oakley and John Lane

5 Came a Revolution

It always appeared a most iniquitous scheme to me to fight ourselves for what we are daily robbing and plundering from those who have as good a right to freedom as we have.

—Abigail Adams

By the middle of the 18th century, slavery was firmly established in America, legal in every colony. That the Negro was an inferior being ordained by God to serve the white man was considered as immutable a law of nature as the law of gravity.

But "Nature and Nature's God" were beginning to speak of other things to men—of certain self-evident truths, certain inalienable rights.

Ironically, as the desire for self-government and political freedom began to stir the hearts of white men, it was a black man who became the first martyr in the struggle to win that freedom.

Crispus Attucks, a self-liberated slave who led a mob that harassed British troops in Boston in March 1770, was the first to fall in that "Boston Massacre."

Negroes were with the Minutemen at Lexington and Concord in April 1775. Negroes participated in Ethan Allen's capture of Ft. Ticonderoga in May. Two Negroes, Peter Salem and Salem Poor, were outstanding heroes at the Battle of Bunker Hill in June.

Then, taking command of the Army and fearing that Negroes might point their muskets in the wrong direction, George Washington issued an order barring them. The Continental Congress passed a confirming resolution.

But a proclamation by the royal governor of Virginia promising freedom for Negroes who joined the British alarmed the colonists. In January 1776, Congress authorized the enlistment of free Negroes. By the time the American cause had reached its lowest point, at Valley Forge in 1777, both slave and free Negroes were welcomed.

In all, some 5,000 of them fought in the Revolution, on land and sea and in nearly every battle, most of them in integrated units.

The spirit of liberty was infectious. Tens of thousands of slaves fled their masters. For a time, it seemed as if the stirring words of the Declaration of Independence about "all men" might really come to mean all men. In 1777, Vermont abolished slavery, and in the next decade most of the North followed.

But it was not to be. The darkest days of slavery in America were yet to come.

Ky Sees Invasion Try Possible Against North

By DANIEL SOUTHERLAND
SAIGON (UPI)—South Vietnam might invade North Vietnam, Sen. Eugene J. McCarthy, if elected president, would not pull U.S. forces from Vietnam. Between puffs on a cigarette came the thoughts, fears and hopes of Nguyen Cao Ky.

In an exclusive weekend interview with United Press International, the South Vietnamese vice president scorned plots to overthrow President Nguyen Van Thieu. He predicted another Viet Cong assault on Saigon within two months. He looked forward to being a gentleman farmer.

"When we talk about marching north, we are serious. For the time being, it is not possible. But later nobody can prevent us from reuniting our country, maybe by military means, maybe by other means. Maybe we will try 'one man, one vote.'"

"If we can make South Vietnam prosperous, in a competitive vote I don't think the north can win... I don't think communism is the ideal for most Vietnamese," he said.

Discusses Candidates
He talked of Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey, former Vice President Richard M. Nixon, McCarthy and other Americans running for the presidency.

"Humphrey and Nixon are both nice men. They are good speakers. I don't know Mr. McCarthy. His policy, you know I can't agree with. But I don't think any future president of the United States will choose an easy solution or a withdrawal or a pullout," of Vietnam.

"China is the real source of trouble in this part of the world. Someday you will have to face Red China. It is better that you face China right now than when they have intercontinental missiles and H-bombs... co-existence with Red China is impossible unless you hand them most of Asia."

Ky scorned more or less frequent reports he thinks of overthrowing Thieu. The persons who talk of such reports, he said, "still believe and see in my image, what do you call it? Captain Midnight."

The 37-year-old former vice air marshal once wore black flying clothes and packed a pistol. "The so-called Thieu-Ky split is now past."

Avoid Divisive Action
"If we have an internal fight now, only the Communists will profit. I will do everything to stop the Communists," he said.

On other topics, he said: —Saigon: The Communists will in the next two months launch "a big and decisive attack" against Saigon and its surrounding area. "Militarily, I have no doubt we will win. But I am concerned about the political side of the battle."

—A peace settlement: It would take a long time because there has been "too much bloodshed. You need time for cooling off. If North Vietnam wants peace, the primary condition is that they must withdraw their troops. We'll solve the problems of South Vietnam very easily then."

—Laos: Air power is not enough to cut the Communist Ho Chi Minh Trail through neighboring Laos. Ky said he proposed a troop drop of his men on the trail in Laos. U.S. commanders "couldn't disagree from a military standpoint but they argued it wouldn't work politically."

Peking's Nuclear Power May Be Help to Peace

By RICHARD M. HARNETT
STANFORD, Calif. (UPI)—By 1972 Communist China will be deploying nuclear armed missiles targeted on U.S. cities, a detailed study for the government indicates.

Paradoxically, this nuclear war capability might reduce the chances of a confrontation, according to the report, prepared by a group of leading China experts.

A draft of the unpublished report has been circulated among government officials and was made available to UPI. It was prepared by a 13-member team of researchers at the Hoover Institution on War, Revolution and Peace at Stanford University for the U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency.

The group included top ranking experts on the military, political and economic affairs of Red China. Dr. Yuan-li Wu, author of a number of books on the Chinese economy, was the project director.

A "high feasibility scenario" was drawn portraying the likely course of events in China between now and 1976. Highlights of the picture include:

—A new attempt at a "great leap forward" beginning in 1969 and ending in 1972 in a "shambles."

—The downfall of Mao Tse-tung in 1972 and a switch to milder, bureaucratic government.

—Concentration on building intercontinental missiles armed with "dirty" nuclear warheads. Little progress in air and ground forces.

—Development of a fleet of submarines that could be posted with nuclear missiles off Hawaii and the U.S. mainland.

—Willingness by China's leaders to enter into arms control agreements that do not limit her own nuclear plans.

—Continuing support of worldwide wars of "national liberation" and continued hostility toward the United States and the Soviet Union.

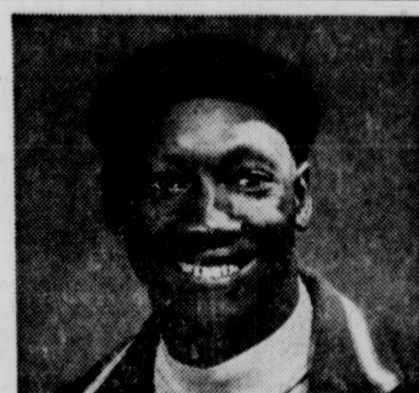

The experts said the capability of waging nuclear war against U.S. cities will persuade the Chinese that they are safe from attack. Thus, they may be willing to agree to some arms control steps such as a "no first use" pact with neighboring countries.

First Heart Transplant Listed in Eastern Europe

BRATISLAVA, Czechoslovakia (UPI)—The first heart transplant operation in Eastern Europe was performed today on a 50-year-old woman by a team of doctors in Bratislava, Radio Bratislava reported.

The report said the heart donor was a 40-year-old man who suffered fatal injuries when he fell from an apartment building. The man had sustained head injuries beyond medical help, it said.

The heart recipient and the donor were not further identified in the report. According to Radio Bratislava the transplant operation began at 9 o'clock this morning. There was no specific mention that it had ended at the time of the broadcast.

The station interrupted a musical program to broadcast an interview with Dr. Vladimir Haviar, apparently a member of the heart transplant team.

Haviar said he himself selected the recipient of the heart. He told listeners in the Bratislava area that a heart transplant had been planned in the city for two months but that three patients selected for the operations died before a donor could be found.

Bratislava is the capital of Slovakia.

There was no immediate confirmation of the transplant operation from other sources.

The operation would be the 25th in the world.

Living heart transplant patients include a man in Cape Town, South Africa; three men in Houston; a woman in Valparaiso, Chile; a man in Montreal and a priest in Paris. Most famous of these is Dr. Philip Blaiberg, 59, in Cape Town, who weakened last weekend to the point where surgeons considered another heart transplant—and possibly a lung transplant—for him. The plan was discarded as Blaiberg rallied from lung and liver ailments.

Playgrounds Hold Checker Championship

The Kingston Parks Checker Championships, the first city-wide tournament sponsored by the Kingston Recreation Department, was held recently at Hutton Park with boys and girls from each of the seven city playgrounds participating.

The tournament represented the culmination of a week of playoff contests in each park, with the winner in the four age groups meeting at Hutton on Friday to determine the city champion. The city-wide tournament winners in each category were: Junior Boys, Richard Sickler, Cornell Park; Junior Girls, Donyelle Crespo, Hutton Park; Senior Boys, Mike Sals, Block Park; and Senior Girls, Holly Effner, Block Park.

Andrew Murphy III, Superintendent of the Parks and Recreation Commission, has announced that a different tournament will be held each week, with the winners from each park meeting at Hutton for the championship. The tournaments are open to all youngsters registered in the Recreation Department's summer program.

Former Nun Speaks

College President Unafraid to Sound Off

By DONALD BERNIS

ST. LOUIS, Mo. (UPI)—Jacqueline Grennan still shakes up the world she lives in. She believes in living "on the brink."

Some 18 months ago she was a Roman Catholic nun. As the outspoken young president of Webster College, a small but prestigious Catholic college for girls in a fashionable suburb, she was a well-publicized symbol of a new breed—the nun who seeks to excel in the world as well as in the cloister.

Then Sister Jacqueline shocked many Catholics by announcing she was leaving the Sisters of Loretto.

"The religious habit," she explained, "is an anachronism to one who operates in the market place and the public forum as I do all the time."

Other nuns have left their religious orders and drifted into obscurity. But obscurity is not Jacqueline Grennan's natural habitat.

Severs School Ties
She not only stayed as president of Webster, but worked successfully to sever the school's connections with the Catholic Church and to turn it into a private coeducational college.

Two women in Southern California wrote her she was the "daughter of Bezelbub" (in the Gospels, the prince of devils).

"They were well-intentioned ladies," Miss Grennan says now. "In their opinion I was destroying the fabric of everything they believed in."

"The attitude of most Catholics was, 'Why doesn't someone make her keep still?'"

The furor died slowly. The legal change was made to convert Webster into a private, non-sectarian college. Some other Sisters of Loretto followed.

JUSTINE GITTINGS, wife of Richard C. Gittings, 17 Rocky Hill Road, New Paltz, was awarded the Bachelor of Science degree cum laude from State University College, New Paltz, at commencement exercises on June 9. A dean's list student, Mrs. Gittings was awarded scholastic scholarships during her sophomore, junior, and senior years, and is a member of Kappa Delta Pi honor society. A 1950 graduate of Kingston High School, Mrs. Gittings will begin studies for a Master's degree in education this September at New Paltz. Mrs. Gittings is the mother of four children: Richard, William, Collins, and Suzanne. Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Van Bramer, reside at 16 South Road, Mt. Marion.

Sister Jacqueline out of the order and continued to teach at the school. The new lay board of trustees retained nuns who did not wish to leave their order but wanted to continue to teach at Webster.

Miss Grennan still sits in the president's chair. She is more the symbol of a new breed than ever and the demands on her time for speeches and other outside engagements are greater. She has written a book, entitled "Where I Am Going," which is a collection of some of her essays and speeches.

No Regrets
She claims no regrets. "I don't mind disagreement or controversy because it's healthy," she said.

"You have to live on the brink. You have to go for broke to have a sense of fulfillment. 'We're so tough on failure in this country that we break the will to try. Orlando Cepeda strikes out, but we Cardinal fans put up with it because we know he's going to hit home runs.'"

She is grateful for the opportunity to publish her book because "I've been quoted so much—in and out of context."

"I think that persons have a right to my own view, not an oblique or distorted view," she said. "The theme of the book is evolutionary: life goes on."

"I do think that I've been lucky and blessed by the people who have loved me. I think that there is more love now between myself and those nuns at Webster who remained Sisters of Loretto than there is in some religious communities."

Miss Grennan has nudged past her 40th birthday, but she could be mistaken for a Webster coed bouncing across campus. Her pleasantly curved figure, shielded for 21 years by the floor-length black habit of the Sisters of Loretto, now favors fashions which could be purchased in a junior miss shop.

Frank and Sincere

The president of Webster has a quick smile and large, soft eyes that twinkle as she talks. Her words come rapidly, and their meaning is frank and sincere.

Wedding Announced

Miss Leslie Sanford, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Sanford of Kingston, became the bride of Robert Pedrick of Woodstock son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Pedrick of Fairfax, Calif., on Saturday, June 29, at Old Dutch Church, Kingston.

The Rev. Arthur E. Oudemool officiated at the ceremony.

NL Is 7-5 Favorite as Drysdale Faces Tiant

By ED FITE

HOUSTON (UPI)—Pitching speed, experience and defense along with a heady winning habit all will be on the National League's side tonight when the senior circuit goes after its sixth major league all-star triumph in a row over the American League.

Edge for Pitchers

And, if those factors weren't enough to awe the American League's power-conscious squad, there's also the temerity which the completely unfamiliar plastic turf Astrodomes instills in players getting their first tests of trying to handle ground balls or liners to the outfield.

The sheer power at the command of American League Manager Dick Williams of the Boston Red Sox keeps the odds fairly close, but despite such all-the-way threats as Carl Yastrzemski of the Red Sox, towering Frank Howard of Washington, Willie Horton of Detroit and Harmon Killebrew of the Minnesota Twins, the Nationals are 7-1-2 to 5 favorites.

The big reason is wrapped up in the mound prowess packed into the National League staff, including starter Don Drysdale (10-5) of the Los Angeles Dodgers, Bob Gibson (11-5) of the champion St. Louis Cardinals and Juan Marichal (15-4) of the San Francisco Giants, who boast 352 strikeouts and 15 shutouts between them.

Edge for Pitchers

The fact that this 39th edition of the mid-summer classic will be played indoors for the first time ever with a prime time television audience watching on television (NBC-TV) 7:15 p.m. EDT gives these pitchers even more of an edge and belittles the hopes of the junior leaguers, who trail 20-17 in all-time standings with one tie.

The American League's plate power, packed into Yastrzemski, Howard, Horton and Killebrew, have shelled their own league pitching for 72 home runs and 175 runs batted in—but the Astrodomes is noted as a power hitter's frustration center and the punch hitter's paradise. And, with the slow-foot Howard and Horton manning the outside outfield patrols the National Leaguers may be able to stretch singles into doubles and convert a budding rally into a full bloom run explosion.

The American League can't hope to match the Nationals on the mound, even if the staff had been as rested as the opposition.

Short Rest for Luis

Starter Luis Tiant of Cleveland (14-5) had only two days rest and the remainder of the staff worked over the weekend. Tiant says he probably will not work more than the first two innings although all-star rules usually call for three inning sprints for all starters.

Williams says he probably will relieve Tiant, who boasts 157 strikeouts this season, with John Odom of Oakland (7-5) because the latter has had more rest than the others and also because Nationals Manager Red Schoendienst of the Cards has all right-handed hitters, except Willie McCovey of the Giants, in the starting lineup.

Southpaw Sam McDowell of Cleveland, whose record is only 8-8 but who is the majors' strikeout king with 168 to his credit, and undefeated Tommy John of the Chicago White Sox, will probably come in later.

The American Leaguers, most of whom have never played on the synthetic Astro turf, got their first taste of it in a 90-minute workout Monday and shortstop Jim Fregosi of the Angels, summed up the reaction pretty well when he said: "It's beautiful. I just hope they don't hit any ground balls at me."

Ball Is Quicker

Brooks Robinson of Baltimore, after a whirl at the third base spot, commented that "the ball is quicker...it seems to pick up speed coming through."

And, Howard, who will be playing in unfamiliar right field, said that while "the bounces are fast, the bounces are fairly true."

The National Leaguers are fairly familiar with the turf since they drop in here occasionally to play the hometown Astros. There's only one Houston player on the squad, first baseman Rusty Staub. Willie Mays, who will start in centerfield for the Nationals in his 19th appearance in the classic, will captain the senior circuit squad. Mickey Mantle of the New York Yankees, making his 16th all-star showup as a likely pinch hitter, will captain the Americans.

Mays to Lead Off

Mays will be the leadoff hitter for the Nationals and will be followed in order by Curt Flood, of the Cards, McCovey, Hank Aaron of Atlanta, Ron Santo of the Cubs, Tommy Helms of Cincinnati, Jerry Grote of the New York Mets and Don Kessinger of the Cubs.

Fregosi will be the American League's leadoff man, followed by Rod Carew of the Twins, Yastrzemski, Howard, Horton, Killebrew, Bill Freehan of Detroit and Brooks Robinson of Baltimore.

Both Williams and Schoendienst said they plan to let everyone play, but admitted that "winning comes first."

Working Press

By CHARLES J. TIANO
Sports Editor

Back in the days when you could find jelly in jelly donuts, the All Star game was the exclusive domain of the American League.

It was the era of lily white baseball. It was the Golden Age of Babe Ruth, Lou Gehrig, Jimmy Foxx, Lefty Gomez, Lefty Grove, Charlie Ruffing, Joe Cronin, Hank Greenberg, Bobby Feller, Bill Dickey and others.

All these American League Olympians have one thing in common. They are enshrined in baseball's Hall of Fame at Cooperstown, hard by James Fenimore Cooper's Lake Glimmerglass.

The symbolism of American League supremacy was evident in the All Star inaugural in 1933 when the immortal Babe Ruth, then 38 years old, hit the first All Star homer out of Comiskey Park, a two-run shot which provided the victory margin in a 4-2 American League win. Lefty Gomez beat Wild Bill Hallahan in that one.

THE AMERICAN LEAGUE went on to win 12 of the first 16 games, but in the meantime Branch Rickey of the Brooklyn Dodgers introduced the first Negro into major league baseball—Jackie Robinson. Then came Willie Mays with the New York Giants.

After that 16th All Star game, the tide began to turn in the All Star game. The Yankee powerhouses managed to hold off the National League in World Series competition but the All Star erosion was steady.

When the rivals clash before 55,000 fans tonight in that seventh wonder of the modern world—the Houston Astrodome—the National League holds a 20-17 edge with every indication it will wrap up victory No. 21. In the lily white days, we would root confidently and vociferously for the American League. Tonight we'll be praying for Joe Cronin's boys.

ONCE JACKIE ROBINSON broke the color barrier, the National League accepted the Negro player with enthusiasm. Not so the American League and two of the worst offenders were two of the best bankrolled clubs in the circuit—the New York Yankees and Boston Red Sox. It took some spirited picketing of Yankee Stadium to get the message to the Yankees. Tom Yawkey and his lumber millions was equally obdurate up Boston way.

The National League's quick acceptance of the Negro ball player paid handsome dividends. The National has been the superior league and it will ever remain that way.

COINCIDENTALLY, IT WAS Red Schoendienst's home run that started the National League on the comeback trail in the 1950 renewal. Red, who leads the National Leaguers tonight, homered in the 14th inning for a 4-3 NL win for Ewell Blackwell.

The Nationals won again in 1951 by 8-3 behind Sal Maglie. In 1952 it was 3-2 in a five-inning rain shortened game with the win to Bob Rush of the Cubs. Warren Spahn was the winner in a 5-1 decision in 1953, before the American League checked the NL winning streak, 11-9, in a wild one in 1954 behind Dean Stone. The Nationals were back in business, 6-5, behind Gene Conley in 1955.

Since then they have been on the ascendancy and there's nothing on the horizon to indicate the American League can ever regain the supremacy.

AH, BUT THERE WERE happy American League days in the days of my youth, even in 1934. That was the year Carl Hubbell of the Giants struck out five AL Hall of Famers in succession—Ruth, Gehrig, Foxx, Simmons and Cronin. Bill Dickey then singled. Hubbell struck out Lefty Gomez to retire the side.

But, you know who won the game? The American League, 9-7.

The year 1935 was significant because the All-Star game attendance record of 69,831 was set at mammoth municipal stadium in Cleveland.

Two years later, President Franklin D. Roosevelt was in attendance when a line drive struck pitcher Dizzy Dean on the right foot, breaking his toe. It was the beginning of the end for the Great Gabbo. The Americans won, 8-3.

REMEMBER THAT WILLIAMS guy? The Boston Red Sox slugger blasted a two-out, two-run homer in the ninth inning for a dramatic 7-5 come-from-behind AL victory in 1941. Five years later, Williams, playing in Fenway Park, cracked a pair of homers in a 12-0 AL rout. His second homer was off a Rip Sewell blooper pitch. Williams laughed himself silly all the way around the bases.

You know what happened last year. Cincinnati's Tony Perez whacked a homer in the 15th inning to give the NL its second straight 2-1 extra-inning win. Two years ago the Nationals outlasted the AL 2-1 in 10 innings of oppressive 110 degree heat in Busch stadium, St. Louis. So, like we said before, we wouldn't bet a dime on the American Leaguers tonight. But we will say a prayer for them.

Janes' No-Hitter Takes County Legion Laurels

Charlie Janes pitched a no-hit, no-run game and struck out 15 Monday night, as Kingston Post American Legion routed the outclassed Lamouree-Hackett Post of Saugerties, 18-0, to annex the 1968 Ulster County American Legion baseball championship.

Next stop for the locals in the long climb to the New York state championship is the 3rd District Tournament at Albany. Date will be announced later.

A warmup contest with Scully Legion Post of Albany is on tap Friday night at 8 o'clock at Dietz Stadium.

Janes, who set the all-time Kingston High school strikeout record of 20 in 9 innings this season, fanned 15 Savayers in last night's game. He faced only 24 batters, three over the minimum. He hit a batter, walked another and the third was safe on Kingston's only miscue.

Greg Rios and Charlie Moore, two area high school stars, led the 13-hit assault on three Saugerties pitchers. Rios knocked in three runs with a double and triple and Moore had three RBIs on a single and triple.

Rick Sorenson knocked in two runs with a single and double. Gary Schatzel and Mike Weishaupt added doubles.

Four in First
It was never a contest after Kingston capitalized a first-inning break to score four runs after two outs.

Moore, third in the batting order, was safe on a two-base error and went to third on an error. Greg Rios walked, stole second and Weishaupt walked loading the bases. Rick Sorenson's double to right field scored Moore and Rios. Janes' single accounted for Weishaupt and Sorenson.

The locals added six in the third and eight in the fifth.

Kingston Hoop Stars Win Big

The Kingston All-Stars, a summer basketball team playing a slate of exhibition games, upped its scoring average to 119 points per game by downing the Albany All-Stars, 158-64.

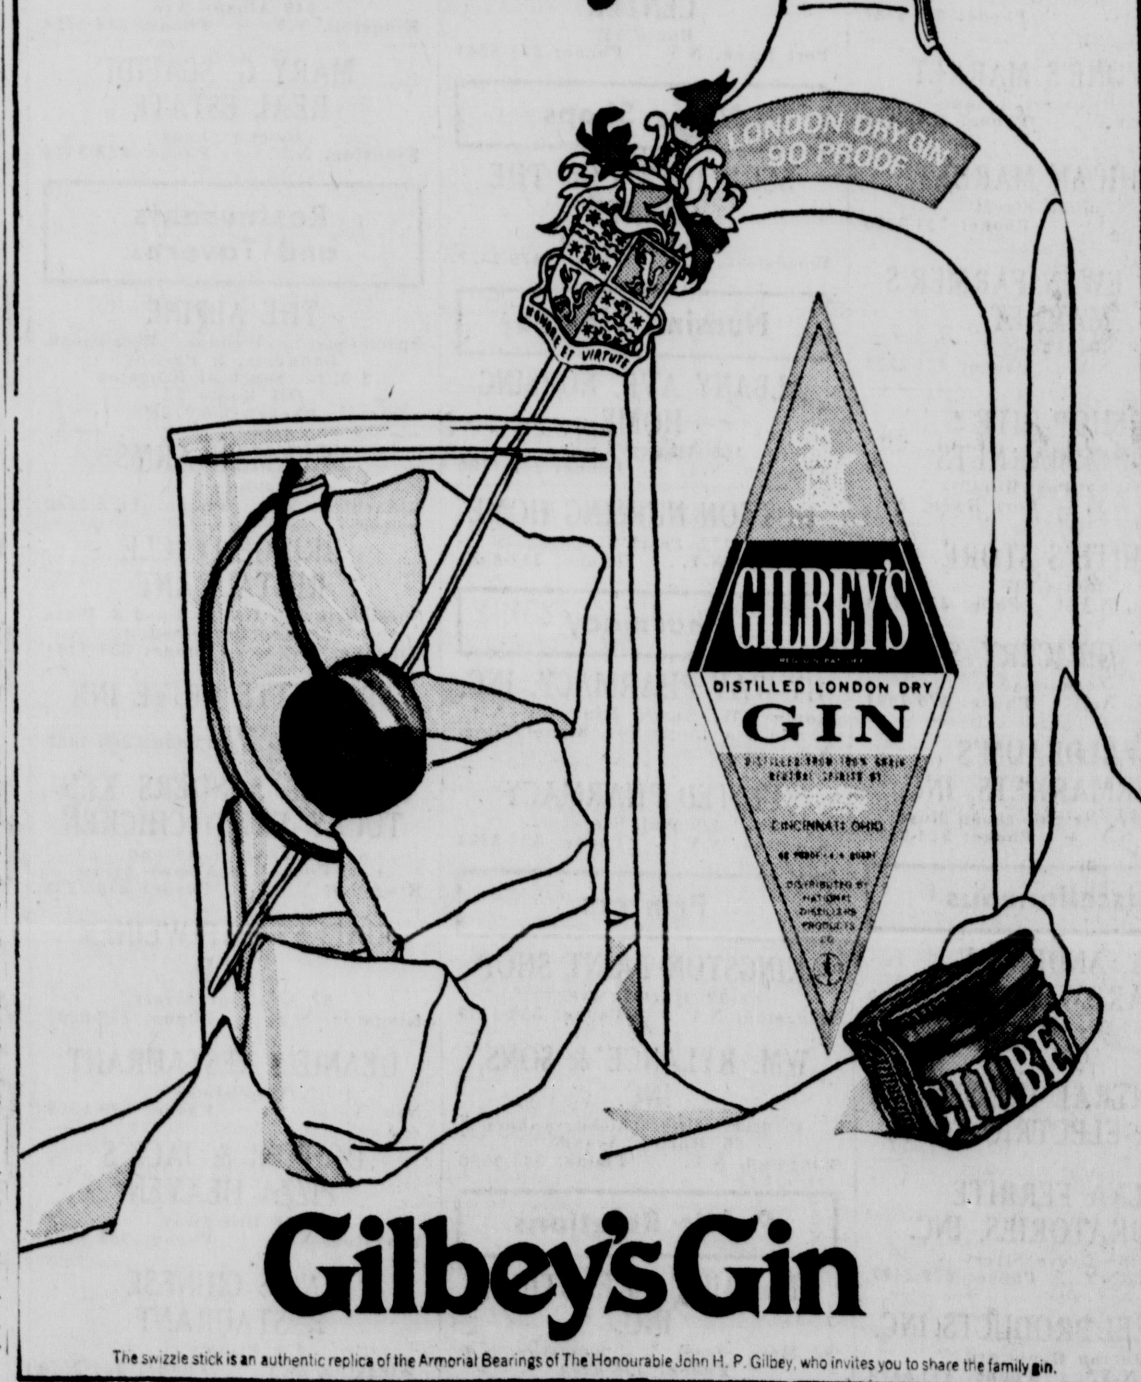

The locals had quarters of 33, 42 and 46 points, marking the fourth time in five outings the Stars have gone over the century mark. The team is 5-0.

Leading the way for coach Al Althier's squad was Doug Clancy with 28. Paul Guerin had 26 and John Machione 22. All nine players for Kingston hit in double figures. Dave Scholar had 12 assists and tossed in 14 in all.

A two-one-two zone, sprinkled liberally with a full-court press completely dominated action for the Kingston-based quintet, and made Albany's scoring attempts futile.

The score:

Albany All Stars (64) — J. Rodgers 10, Allen 5, Baker 8, A. Rodgers 9, Mitchell 8, McDermott 11, Haze 13.

Dirty Dozen Club Award to Bob Joyet

Honor Freeman Sports Editor With Scholarship for Soccer

A group of Kingston area soccer buffs who call themselves "The Dirty Dozen" has announced plans to award an annual scholarship to a worthy high school soccer player.

The award, which is worth $250 in cash, will be given in the name of Charles J. Tiano, Freeman Sports Editor.

Winner of the 1968 scholarship is Robert Joyet of Ulster Park, a member of Kingston High's first varsity soccer squad. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Andre Joyet.

Under the terms of the scholarship, the student must have excelled in the sport of soccer, been a good student and planning to enter a four-year college. Joyet plans to enter Northeastern University in Boston in September.

The Dirty Dozen group was formed in December, 1967, primarily for social purposes, but later the membership decided to promote good will and develop interest in the sport of soccer. Several of the group are members of the Kingston Sport Club, sponsors of the Kingston entry in the German-American Soccer Association.

The club has no president but through one of its spokesmen, William (Bill) Oehler, proprietor of Oehler's Mountain Lodge, home base of the Kingston Kickers, elaborated on the scholarship.

"The Dirty Dozen is happy to award its first annual scholarship in honor of Charlie Tiano, the Freeman sports editor."

"He has worked hard to promote the sport and the outstanding coverage given by the Freeman has been responsible for the increasing interest in soccer in our area," Oehler added.

Sires to Jounce, Medal Frost

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Medal Frost and Jounce emerged as victors in the two divisions of the Grand Circuit and W. N. Reynolds Memorial Stakes which featured 12 of the nation's best 2-year-old trotting fillies Monday night at Buffalo Raceway. The total purse for the two divisions of the New York State harness series was $18,253.

Medal Frost, driven by Joe O'Brien, in the first division, covered the mile in 2:10 4-5 and paid $16.40, $7.20 and $3.00.

In second place, 1 1/4 lengths behind, was Clarissa Hanover, with Brovade third.

Clint Hodgins drove Jounce to a three-quarter length victory over Sandy Lobell in the second division, with Fran Arden third.

Jounce was timed in 2:11 for the mile and paid $9.60, $4.00 and $2.80.

A Victory, But No Leg on Trophy For Mrs. McMahon at Woodstock

Rene McMahon, wife of Lewis D. McMahon of Rifton, won the Kathy A. Larson Challenge Trophy for the second time in the 21st annual Woodstock Riding Club-Woodstock Jaycees AHSA-sanctioned horse show.

Under AHSA rules, however, Mrs. McMahon does not get a second leg on the trophy which must be won three times for permanent possession since she took this year's competition on another horse.

She now has one leg on the trophy with two different horses. The trophy goes to the Woodstock Riding Club member who accumulates most points during the day.

Mrs. McMahon captured firsts in Senior Western Horseman, Bareback Western Horseman, and Western Pleasure enroute to the Larson trophy win.

Virgil Van Wageningen of Bearsville and the stand-out Kingston driver, Miss Linda Avery, tied for the Reserve championship with 10 points each. Miss Avery was awarded the cup on a toss of a coin. Mrs. McMahon racked up 18 points.

Glasco, Boo's in Overtime Wins

SPORTS — GLASCO, BOO'S — HD—

It was a wild and woolly show in the Saugerties Softball League last night. Two games were on tap, one each in the Yankee and Met Divisions, and both went into overtime. The result — standings in both divisions were shuffled, putting a new leader on top in the Yankee division and tightening up the Met standings.

The Met contest found Boo's moving to within a half-game of the top rung by taking a 12-inning, 7-6 win over A. J. Scarselli and in the Yankee clash, Glasco A.C. replaced South Side Men's Club as the front-runner by clubbing the Men's Club, 4-3 in 11 frames.

It was the loss of control in those final stanzas that produced the wins. Scarselli's pitcher, Tom Carpino gave up a lead-off triple in the 12th, then wild pitched the run across.

South Side's hurler, John Freiligh, allowed a double in the 11th, then walked the bases full, got the next two batters, but forced in the winning tally by tossing four straight balls for a walk.

Don Minkler, Boo's rightfielder, led off the 12th with a triple, and raced home with the victory when Carpino wild pitched. It was Minkler's first hit, but he scored twice prior to pace the winners.

Boo's, down 2-0 going to the bottom of the third, got five off Carpino to forge ahead. Two of those runs came with two outs on a bases-loaded missed third strike.

A two-run homer by Don Simmons in the sixth and a two-out, RBI single by Steve DePoala in the seventh sent it into extra innings.

The Yankee game saw Leroy Lasher lead off the 11th with a double, his fourth hit of the game. Intentional walks filled the sacks, South Side figuring it could cut off all runs at the plate. A pair of infield popups made the strategy look great — for a while at least. When Freiligh walked Gabe DePoala on four straight pitches, the top two teams did a reversal, Glasco taking over the league lead and South Side dropping to second.

A first inning walk, a sacrifice and Bob Mignano's safety put South Side ahead. Leroy Lasher's homer knotted it in the fourth.

It was see-saw all the way, right down to the last out in the seventh. Angelo Castillo of South Side singled through the infield to knot the score at 3-all and send it overtime.

Bank Chiefs Deny Charge That Powers Dangerous

WASHINGTON (AP) — Banking leaders deny charges in a congressional study that the power of some of the nation's commercial banks is now snowballing dangerously.

"Exaggerations, half-truths and ridiculous conclusions," said a spokesman for Cleveland Trust.

Antitrust Question

Subcommittee Chairman Wright Patman, D-Tex., asked Atty. Gen. Ramsey Clark to look into possible antitrust questions raised by the study, which was compiled by the panel's staff but has not yet been formally adopted.

"The American economy of today is in the greatest danger of being dominated by a handful of corporations in a single industry as it has been since the great money trusts of the early 1900s," Patman said.

"A few banking institutions are in a position to exercise significance, and perhaps eventual control over some of the largest business enterprises in the nation," he added.

Main thrust of the study was its contention that banks' influence is exerted largely through the estimated $607 billion assets which banks hold as trustees for pension funds, foundations, private trusts and other actual owners.

State Demos Bid Rocky Speed Up Choice

WASHINGTON (AP) — Five of New York State's Democratic congressmen have appealed jointly to Republican Gov. Rockefeller to speed his designation of a successor to the late Sen. Robert F. Kennedy.

The Senate soon will consider several appropriations bills "dealing with the urban crisis about which you have expressed such great concern," they said Monday in a letter to the New York governor.

They also cited measures concerning foreign aid, tariffs, education and health.

"You cannot in good conscience deny to more than 12 million New Yorkers representation on these matters," the congressmen said.

The five are Reps. Otis G. Pike of Riverhead, Lester L. Wolff of Great Neck, Jonathan B. Bingham and James M. Scheuer, both of the Bronx, and Richard L. Ottinger of Pleasantville.

They added that they hoped the successor would be a man willing to carry out "ideas and ideals" espoused by Kennedy.

Rockefeller is not expected to fill the vacant seat until after the Republican National Convention next month.

Driver to Appear

Charged with driving a truck with inadequate brakes as the aftermath of a fatal traffic accident, Richard Forbes, of Ellenville, is scheduled to appear before Police Justice Ronald Elias in that community on July 16. Police said Forbes was the driver of a truck which spilled its cargo of 12 tons of brick on 4-year-old Valerie Regan who was crushed to death by the bricks as she was standing alongside Canal Street with two other girls on June 17.

More than 54 per cent of the total trust assets in the nation are held by 49 banks in 10 large cities, the subcommittee said.

And these same 49 banks, it added, "hold a total of 768 interlocking directorships with 286 of the 500 largest industrial corporations in the United States."

The airline and nonferrous metals industries, plus newspaper and magazine publishing companies, were cited as examples where bank trust departments hold large blocks of stock.

"The implication that important amounts of Newsday stock are held by the trust department of a bank is wrong," said a spokesman for the Long Island, N.Y., paper.

But Not Now

He said that the Morgan Guaranty Trust Co. of New York at one time did hold stock in trust as an executor but not now.

Morgan Guaranty also was listed in the report as holding large blocks of stock in Trans World Airlines and United Airlines.

"If we were interested in influencing competition we obviously would have increased these holdings," said Thomas S. Gates, Morgan chairman. "We have done the opposite. Some time ago, solely for investment reasons, we disposed of most of our airlines stocks and put these

2 Rowboats Stolen

Hudson Police Arrest Trio

HUDSON, N.Y. (UPI)—Three teenagers were arrested Monday night after a rock and brick throwing spree that caused $2,000 damage to car windshields and store windows in several area communities.

State police identified the youths as Lawrence Stodolski, 19, Joseph Christiansa, 17, and Chester Everetts, 16, all of RD Hudson.

Police said the youths would drive along a highway and hurl rocks at passing cars, breaking windshields or otherwise damaging the vehicles. No one was injured, but reports of rock throwing came from several communities, including Hudson, Chatham, Greenport and Valatie.

All three were arraigned before a justice of the peace at Greenport and remanded to Columbia County jail in lieu of $500 bail each.

Police said Stodolski went to a police station to report damage to his car and an inspection disclosed a quantity of rocks in the back seat. Police said the boys then told them they rode around on highways and through village streets hurling rocks at plate glass windows and cars.

In one instance, damage to a single store window was placed at $400.

Summoned By Police

Douglas H. Sanderson, 26, of Ellenville, was summoned early today by Kingston police on charges of speeding, operating an unregistered motor vehicle, passing a stop sign and driving a car with unsafe tires. Douglas Perry, 20, of 23 Pearl Street, was booked for driving at a speed not reasonable and prudent and operating without a license. Police also booked Bruce Catherwood, 22, of Clintondale, for driving at a speed not reasonable and prudent. The summonses are returnable before City Judge Hubert A. Richter.

Doctors Are Divided On Blaiberg Case

CAPE TOWN (UPI)—Dr. Philip Blaiberg's doctors disagreed sharply on how to save the world's longest surviving heart transplant patient from serious lung and liver complications, medical sources said today.

The argument over whether to perform still another transplant or to give Blaiberg an anti-rejection drug became so intense, these sources said, that "Blaiberg the man had been forgotten."

The 53-year-old retired dentist showed continued improvement Monday and asked for steak and eggs. Doctors attributed his recovery to an anti-lymphocyte serum imported from Europe.

Another transplant was ruled out.

"Dr. Blaiberg's progress continues," Groote Schuur Hospital said in a bulletin Monday night. "Both the lung complication and the hepatitis show further evidence of improvement. The patient is much more cheerful."

The controversy over how to treat Blaiberg involved Dr.

Christiaan Barnard, the pioneer transplant surgeon who performed Blaiberg's transplant, and Dr. Velve Schire, head of the hospital's heart clinic. Barnard insisted the only way to save the patient was to perform another transplant, the medical sources said. Schire, described as "a conservative down to the bootstraps," recommended the drug.

Short-Wave Radio Fouled By Bright Solar Flare

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — The Space Disturbance Forecast Center reported.

And, according to the government scientists, there's a better than even chance of further radio trouble from the same flare on Wednesday, with the signs of the sun pointing to more big solar flares in the not-too-distant future.

The sun appeared no larger or brighter than usual to anyone venturing a glance with his naked eye at 1:03 p.m. EDT.

But delicate sun-watching instruments here, and at a dozen "flare patrol" stations around the world, recorded a big change.

Scientists saw a large, intense white spot appear on the red mass the sun appears to be

Low Highway Death Toll

Safety Gain

CHICAGO (AP) — The lower-than-expected highway death toll during the Independence Day weekend represents a significant gain in traffic safety, the National Safety Council says.

The council had estimated in advance that between 700 and 800 Americans might die on streets and highways over the four-day weekend. The final toll from 6 p.m. Wednesday to midnight Sunday was 620. This compared with 553 deaths in a non-holiday week of equal length.

Dear Abby

Tell Sailor to Get Lost!

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am a divorced woman, mid-40s, attractive (so I'm told), and my hobby is boating.

Let me explain. I am not madly man-hunting as I have a pretty good social life, although I have no one special at the moment.

My problem is a joker whose boat is tied up next to mine in the marina. He is in his early fifties, very attractive, and also entertaining on his boat. He is always very friendly when he sees me, but the only time I ever hear from him is when he wants to BORROW something. (He's borrowed everything from fishing gear to a fifth of vodka.) He always pays me back, but this is what bugs me.

He asked if he could borrow my boat for a night as he was entertaining a "lady" and wanted to try out my new navigation equipment! Now, what would YOU have told him?

SUNDAY SAILOR
DEAR SAILOR: I would have boxed his compass and told him to get lost.

DEAR ABBY: All my life my parents have raised me to be courteous and to respect my elders. This is getting harder every day. I will give you an example.

Last week I went to a baseball game with two of my friends. They left their seats in the stadium for a few moments and while they were gone a man about my father's age started to move in and signaled another man to come join him. I told him those seats belonged to my friends who would be back any moment. He said he would move when my friends returned.

By Oswald and James Jacoby
 Bea Gale Schenken of New York and Sally Johnson of Westport, Conn., won the Women's Pairs in the Eastern championship with better than 73 per cent game for the two sessions.

You have to be lucky to get that good a score, but you also have to go about making Dame Fortune smile on you.

Bea's four club bid in the sample hand was Gerber. She decided to gamble on a slam if her partner held at least two aces and wanted to be dummy.

Well, when my friends came back, this man refused to move. I reminded him that he had given his word, but he said, "Listen, kid, I'm 30 years older than you. You kids go find other seats."

Not wanting to start trouble, my friends left and sat somewhere else.

Now why are kids expected to show respect and be courteous to adults when adults act like this to us?

TEEN-AGER
DEAR TEEN-AGER: Teen-agers complain (and justifiably so) that they are individuals and don't want to be judged by teen-agers who behave in a discreditable manner. The same goes for adults. The men were rude and inconsiderate, but they fortunately do not represent ALL adults. Be fair.

DEAR ABBY: When my husband died eight months ago, a very nice looking man attended the funeral. He said he had been a very good friend of my husband. I never saw the man before, but he couldn't have been nicer to me. He kept calling on me to keep me company in my sorrow, and I invited him over for Sunday meals and so on. I will leave out a lot of details because they are rather personal, but here is what I want to get across:

It turned out that this man had never known my husband! He makes a practice of reading the newspapers to find out where funerals are, how old the deceased was, where he lived, the number of children, and some of the lodges he belonged to, etc. Then he calls on the widow to get acquainted, saying he had been a good friend of her husband.

If I hadn't accidentally found out that he did this to other widows, I might have gotten even more seriously involved than I did. And it would have cost me a lot of money, too. Please print this as a warning to other unsuspecting widows.

"The wise man controls his destiny... Astrology points the way."

FORECAST FOR WEDNESDAY JULY 10, 1968

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Get basic obligations out of way early. Later, social activity actually aids where business income is concerned. Means this is combination of work and play, a day which tests your versatility.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): During morning, early afternoon hours you may be busy with correspondence, messages, calls. Later, you get down to basic issues. You can do much to advance ambitions, aims. Have faith.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Responsibilities could conflict with travel desires. Check financial status. Be sure you know the truth about expenses. Member of opposite sex is demanding. Strive for balance.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You can get answer to financial dilemma, but it requires co-operation from mate, partner. Probe deep—go beyond superficial indications. Better to finish than to begin projects.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Tonight, you face issues which you had put off, delayed. Whatever you do, do it with enthusiasm. Make peace with one who opposed your views. Key is being creative and interested.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): What you do today brings almost immediate results. Be sure your actions are positive. Otherwise, you could find the costs exceeding the results. Common sense is your great ally.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Good lunar aspect tonight coincides with romantic interests, creative endeavors. Some restrictions are lifted. Remember, responsibility goes hand-in-hand with freedom.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Forces become concentrated. Your view narrows to specific goal. Know truth when you encounter it. Means be realistic. Don't be afraid to confront challenge. If thorough, you succeed.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Communications connected with relatives appear to dominate. Exchange ideas. Don't be afraid to speak your mind. Key is to be frank and also considerate.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You receive benefits of efforts, including money. This is a day when you gain satisfaction. Keep balance. Realize you gain what is earned. This is time when you are vindicated.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Cycle moves up. You can safely take initiative. Meet people. State views. Be independent in thought, action. Original methods pay off. Stick to principles. Be unique rather than average.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Be discreet. Get needed rest. Pressures are obvious, but you need not bow to them. One you are close to may be in predicament. Be sympathetic without becoming needlessly involved.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are known by only a few persons. A quiet exterior disguises strong creative urges. Changes on horizon lead to greater expressions.

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Cycle high for AQUARIUS: Special word to LEO: give attention to problems of mate, partner.

Peter Graves

'Mission' Star—Long Climb

By PETER GRAVES

EDITOR'S NOTE — Peter Graves, after some traumatic experiences, is now established in the CBS hit, "Mission: Impossible," and is that rarest of actors: a happy actor. Here he tells about some of the difficult times during the long climb, including playing second fiddle to a horse.

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — One of television's favorite parlor games is called "biting the hand that feeds you." It's played by actors and actresses in hit series usually after two or three years of having their stomachs fed and egos massaged.

At this point, the nouveau-star suddenly arrives at one or more of the following insights: (1) he has sacrificed his "artistic integrity" for a series which really isn't worthy of his talents; (2) he's "bored" with playing the same role week after week; and (3) he isn't getting nearly the salary or fringe benefits he deserves for "carrying" the show.

He confides in the press, "The truth is I'm ready for bigger things. I should be starring in major movies or playing on Broadway. But that fool I took on as my agent signed me to a long-term contract — I didn't know any better; after all, I was working at a gas station when we met — and now I'm stuck in this rotten show."

The actor who takes this attitude is naive or inexperienced or both, and for his own sake, ought to have some sense pounded into him. Instead, he's apt to suffer a worse fate. The industry just may call his bluff, and he'll find himself back si-phoning high octane.

What such performers forget, particularly when they start reading their own publicity, is that landing the lead in a highly rated TV series takes more than talent. It requires luck and timing and the contribution of directors, writers, cameramen, stage hands and many others.

I can speak from experience. When I stepped off the train in Hollywood 15 years ago, I figured I was ready to storm both movie and TV citadels. After all, at 16, I'd been the youngest radio announcer in the history of station WMIN in Minneapolis and had received glowing notices for "MacBeth" and "Of Mice and Men" at the University of Minnesota.

So what if there were no brass bands or gorgeous starlets to greet me? There was probably a supermarket opening on the other side of town, and all the brass bands and starlets were gathered there.

I set my sights on landing a starring role in a major prime-time TV series. Meanwhile, I was fortunate enough to appear in several movies, including "Stalag 17," "Rogue River," and "The Court Martial of Billy Mitchell."

Horse Had the Lines

Finally, I did get a television series, "Fury." It wasn't exactly prime time (unless you consider Saturday mornings prime time) and while I was nominally the star, a horse had all the good lines. For the next six years, my fan mail came from youngsters, 6 to 10, who figured I was a lucky guy to get that close to such a smart horse.

While the prospect of a hit series remained as elusive and ethereal as the town of Brigadoon, I was busy in movies, television and the Broadway theater, and the Bank of America and I were on excellent terms.

Finally, this past season, it happened. I was contacted by the producers of "Mission: Impossible" and was asked to create the new role of Jim Phelps. After a 15-year wait, I'm obviously delighted. And I find it ironic and a little sad when performers, in other top-rated series, grouse about "artistic suffocation" and publicly call for their own series to fail as a way out of their contractual obligations.

To borrow a phrase from "Mission: Impossible," that's self-destruction. Not the kind that happens when a secret tape goes bang! But the kind that gets place when actor's ego gets bigger than his talent or his good sense.

Cynthia Lowry is on vacation.

OFFICE CAT

An inebriate staggered into a bar and placed a big live lobster in front of him.

After downing a martini, he said, "Joe — Shay, you make the best martinis in town and I'm going to give you Ethelbert, my pet lobster."

George (the bartender) — "Fine, I'll take him home for dinner."

Joe — "No, no don't do that! He had dinner. Take him to a show."

Don't do the things you saw done that ruined friendships and chilled hearts and the world will be yours.

Farmer Perkins (who owned the pond) — "Say! don't you see that sign: NO FISHING HERE?"

Mr. Jones (the disgruntled fisherman) — "I sure do. The fellow that printed that sign knew what he was talkin' about!"

Seek not the favor of the multitude; it is seldom got by honest and lawful means.

Mrs. Smith (told the teller at the bank) — "I want to know how much money my husband drew out of the bank last week."

Mr. Small (the teller) — "I can't give you that information, madam."

Mrs. Smith — "You're the paying teller, aren't you?"

Relax, gentlemen. There's been talk about having a woman for President. But there's no danger — a President has to be at least 35 years old.

Question: What's the first thing the Pilgrims did when they landed on Plymouth Rock?

Answer: They cleared the beer cans off the beach.

At a school board examination the inspector asked a boy if he could forgive those who had wronged him.

Inspector Gray — "Could you, forgive a boy, for example, who had insulted or struck you?"

Johnny (very slowly) — "Y-e-s, sir. I - think - I - could; (but, he added, in a much more rapid manner.) — I could if he was bigger than I am."

Rocky Wooing the Missouri Bloc, Reagan Ticket 'Wide Open' Now

By United Press International
Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller of New York campaigned in Nixon territory today, wooing members of the 24-man Missouri delegation to the Republican National Convention.

Beams at Turnout

Rockefeller, beaming at a turnout police estimated totaled 11,000, repeated for the crowds his promise of "new leadership" to replace the old politicians if he is elected president.

In a slight change of position from several weeks ago, Rockefeller said there still was a "wide open" possibility of a ticket with himself as head and Gov. Ronald Reagan of California as the vice presidential candidate.

"I don't think any combination should be ruled out," he said.

Rockefeller had spoken of the suggestion with some coolness in recent weeks.

For his part, Reagan told newsmen in Sacramento that he will become a serious candidate for the top spot on the ticket if he gets a sizeable bloc of votes from other states at the convention.

However, he did not detail

how much support in addition to California's 86-vote delegation it would take to convince him to make his favorite son candidacy an all-out effort.

Other developments:

George C. Wallace—The former Alabama governor opened a bid for third-party spot on Massachusetts presidential ballot with a day-long series of stops north of Boston. He told enthusiastic crowds the United States should fight to win in Vietnam.

Nixon Defends Membership

Richard M. Nixon—The former vice president defended his membership in the Baltusol Golf Club of Springfield, N.J., which excludes Negroes and

Jews. He said he disapproved of such membership "restrictions" but "it has never been my practice to resign from such clubs but rather to work from within to change the policy." He hosted a cocktail party for the state's 40 GOP national delegates at the club.

Hubert H. Humphrey—The vice president, fighting a case of the flu, appeared briefly in Washington for the opening of a summer youth sports program. In San Diego, William Schnitzler, secretary-treasurer of the AFL-CIO, urged union members to support Humphrey.

Eugene J. McCarthy—Leaders of the late Sen. Robert F. Kennedy's New Jersey campaign organization joined with McCarthy backers in announcing formation of a joint steering committee. They stopped short of endorsing Humphrey's candidacy, but said they would not be able to support Humphrey unless he separates himself from President Johnson's policies.

Harold Stassen—The former Minnesota governor met for 45 minutes with New York Mayor John Lindsay, then angered the mayor by disclosing the meeting to newsmen. Stassen said either he or Lindsay could beat Humphrey in a presidential election, and there "was some chance, granted that it's remote," that one of them would win the GOP nomination. Lindsay is not an announced candidate.

501 in the Nixon Column

WASHINGTON (AP)—With four weeks to go before the Republican National Convention begins, Richard M. Nixon pushed just past the three-quarter mark Monday, in terms of publicly committed delegates, toward a first-ballot nomination for president.

First-Ballot Intentions

In an Associated Press tabulation of first-ballot intentions of the Miami Beach delegates, as dictated by primary results, pledged at the time of election or stated in an AP poll, the former vice president had 501 of the required 667 votes.

The biggest pick-up of the past week was at least 25 Texas delegates who went along when Sen. John G. Tower dropped a favorite son stance and went to Nixon.

New York Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller stood at 192 in the table.

The Republicans had only eight more delegates to pick, in Utah the coming weekend, to fill their 1,333 convention seats.

Backing favorite sons or otherwise at least ostensibly on the fence were 589 delegates, plus 43 outside of California who had picked Gov. Ronald Reagan, that state's favorite son.

677 1/2 for Hubert

In the same tabulation Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey stood at 677 1/2 of the 1,312 needed for first-ballot nomination in the Chicago Democratic Convention opening Aug. 26.

Trailing at 414 was Sen. Eugene J. McCarthy.

Another 15 votes were scattered among various others.

More than half of the total Democratic convention roster of 2,622 was uncommitted in public at that point. That situation was still sharply complicated by the assassination of Sen. Robert F. Kennedy which shifted more than 300 votes from him to the uncommitted category. The bulk of those still had not stated a new choice, thus helping build up the total of 779 1/2 generally uncommitted. The favorite son total was 537 1/2.

The Democrats had just under 100 more votes to allot.

Talk With Lynda LBJ's Clincher

NEW YORK (UPI)—Only hours before he told the nation he would not seek reelection, President Johnson broke the news to Hubert Humphrey and told the vice president he was not sure he could survive another term, according to Look magazine.

The "final clincher," according to an article by Drew Pearson in the magazine's July 23rd issue, was a talk Johnson had that morning with his elder daughter, Lynda Bird Robb. Pearson said Johnson met Lynda the day after she saw her husband Chuck Robb off to Vietnam. She spoke of Robb as if he were already dead.

"She was as pale as a ghost," the President said. "She talked to me about what a fine boy Chuck was, in the past tense, as if he was never coming back. And she said, 'Daddy, I want to ask you a question. Why do we have to fight over there when so many people are opposed to the war. Why do we have to send 200 boys over there in Chuck's company when there's so much opposition here at home to the war?"

That night, at 9:40 p.m., Johnson announced his retirement.

Look said Johnson told Humphrey he was stepping down because he didn't think the American people would believe his move for peace unless he did. Then, the magazine said, he added:

"There's another thing. I'm tired. I'm getting old. All the men in my family have a record of not living much over the age of 60. I'll be 60 this summer. I've had a heart attack. My health is pretty good. I think my chart is as good as yours. But I'm not sure I could live out another term. And that's not the way I want to end my life."

The White House declined comment on the Look article.

Safety IS Everyone's JOB

By ALAN S. BOYD
U.S. Secretary of Transportation

The United States had 97.5 million vehicles registered in 1967 and motorists on our nation's highways traveled 937 billion intercity road miles during that twelve month period.

This exceptional annual pace makes it quite clear why highway safety must become everyone's business.

It is, of course, the most vital business for the driver. He has everything to lose, including his life.

It is also the business of each state, where constant improvement of traffic systems and safety programs is necessary.

And it is, finally, the business of the Federal government where, through the Department of Transportation, we are seeking to encourage better drivers, safer autos and safer traffic and highway systems.

The Department of Transportation, during 1967, issued its first auto safety standards, designed to improve the safety of new motor vehicles. These standards, which require such safety devices as seat belts, collapsible steering columns, etc., already are beginning to have their impact felt.

We believe that these safety devices are saving lives and will continue to save lives.

In 1967 we also issued our first standards for encouraging and assisting, through Federal grants, the improvement of traffic safety programs in all our states.

Safety Up to Driver

These first thirteen standards, which the state legislatures have begun to enact, require such things as periodic motor vehicle inspection, motorcycle helmets, etc.

I cannot emphasize too strongly, however, that no amount of government regulation is going to stop the slaughter on our nation's highways — almost 1,000 traffic deaths per week last year — unless the drivers themselves recognize the need for a greater personal effort toward safer driving.

The number of accidents each year continues to rise at an alarming rate.

The resulting economic losses have reached the phenomenal figure of nearly a billion dollars monthly.

By the end of 1967 it took eight million days of hospitalization merely for the care and treatment of survivors of automobile accidents.

As Dr. William Haddon, director of the National Highway Safety Bureau, has said many times, crashes on highways are not accidents: something made them happen.

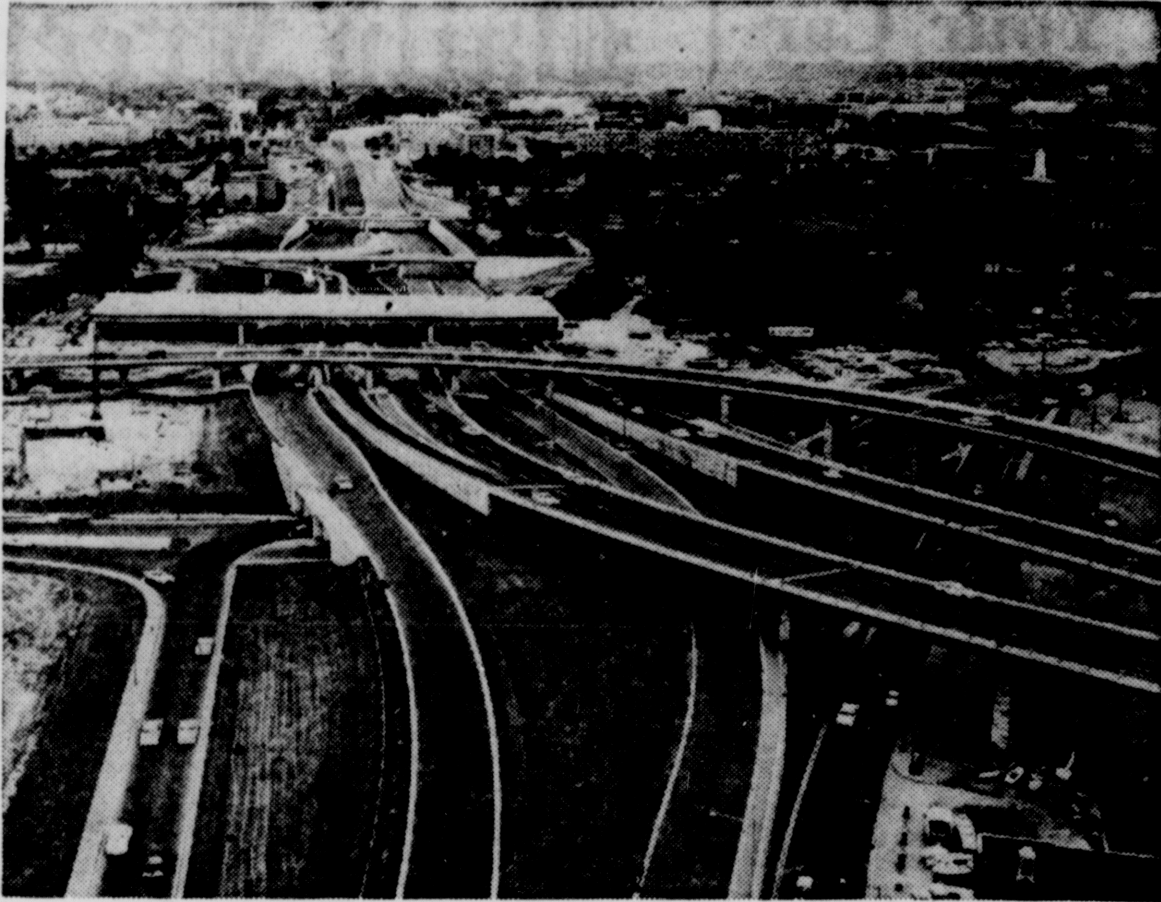

Ready to Compensate

Since crashes will continue to occur in substantial number for the foreseeable future, we are placing strong emphasis on greatly improving the crash design of vehicles, and especially the safety of the passenger section of the family car.

The Department of Transportation is ready to cooperate with all state and local agencies in our drive to make this nation one of the safest in the world.

You can do your part by making safety your primary consideration every time you get behind the wheel of an auto.

And this means, of course, making sure that your auto is safe — as well as your driving habits.

New superhighways like this new Washington, D.C. road can help cut the highway accident toll in the U.S. Limited access roads, both in cities and in rural areas, are safer to travel on than conventional thoroughfares. Also, they take the strain out of driving, cut travel time dramatically.

The Automobile: 4-Wheel Freedom

When this nation's founders issued their call for freedom across the land, there was one freedom whose existence was beyond their most vivid visions. That freedom was the freedom of movement which was not really possible until this century.

Thanks to the development of the automobile, this freedom of movement has been a true liberation for the great majority of Americans.

With it, the confines of neighborhoods and communities gave way to unlimited access to all parts of our nation.

Business trips, vacation journeys to anywhere a road will take you have widened out activities, increased our pleasure.

Equally liberating has been the development of the automobile itself. From capricious, "Get-out-and-get-under" transportation of 50 years ago, the car has become so dependable that even the most delicate woman can drive anywhere with certainty.

How important a factor the automobile has become in America can be shown by a few startling statistics.

13 Million Employed

According to the Automobile Manufacturers Association, nearly 13 million people are employed in the manufacture, distribution, maintenance and commercial use of the car.

One out of every six businesses is directly dependent on making, distributing and servicing automobiles. In fact, well over a half million enterprises are automotive, accounting for 5 per cent of all retail sales.

Yet these statistics don't begin to show the immense impact the car has on all our lives.

Eight out of ten families own cars and two out of ten own more than one car.

Eighty-two per cent of us depend on cars to take us to work.

Almost 90 per cent of us take vacation trips by car.

Such statistics are irrefutable proof that not only do cars provide us with our living but make that living more meaningful and enjoyable.

A Word of Caution

Yet with the freedom the car has given us, we have not always accepted the responsibility this freedom provides. Too many of us are heedless of the fact that a carelessly driven car can kill or maim.

Too many of us, who are careful drivers, do not pay enough attention to the condition of our cars. This carelessness is a definite, if not precisely measurable, factor in the highway accident picture.

As simple as the car is to operate, it is a complex machine with thousands of working parts. As such, it requires attention of qualified maintenance people.

And all systems of your car need attention to assure safe and dependable operation. It is obvious that a set of tires that is allowed to deteriorate is an obvious threat to safety. It is not as obvious that an untuned engine is a safety menace. It becomes more obvious when one considers that an untuned engine adversely affects safe passing on the road. Also, a car stalled on an expressway, due to ignition failure, is a potential hazard.

While critics of the auto industry have blamed car makers for not paying enough attention to safety, a logical analysis of the problem shows a deeper cause.

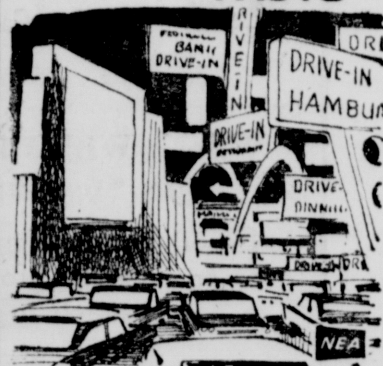

The auto makers have not been able to repeal laws of friction, oxidation and other physical and chemical factors that lead to inevitable deterioration of car components.

It is still up to the motorist to match his freedom of movement with responsibilities.

There is the responsibility to others of maintaining a safe car. There is the responsibility to self to protect a large investment by thorough, conscientious car care.

This section is dedicated to greater freedom of movement by helping the reader live up to the important responsibility of car care.

Vision Important For Safe Driving

Unlike the myopic millionaire who solved his driving visibility problems by installing prescription windshields, most Americans have to be content with more routine means to see where they're going.

Fortunately, you don't have to be a millionaire or even close to it to maintain maximum good visibility in your car. Yet it's as vital to safe operation as sound brakes and tires.

Chances are every time you stop for gas, the attendant cleans your glass. But he seldom if ever cleans it from the inside. Condensed moisture and tobacco film cling to glass areas, cutting down visibility, especially at night.

Also, evaporation of plastic softeners, used in vinyl upholstery, collects on the interior glass.

Don't Overfill

If you should be adding water to your car's battery be careful not to overfill. Spilled acid will attack metal hold down cables and other parts adjacent to the battery.

To eliminate these hazards, wash the inside of the glass area with a window-cleaning solvent at regular intervals.

Another barrier to good visibility is worn wiper blades. Streaking on the windshield is a sign that the blades need replacement. Also have the tension on the wiper arms checked. Too little tension makes wipers ineffective and the arms may need replacement.

Naturally, a constantly high level of windshield washer fluid is a must. Remind your attendant to check this when he checks your oil.

Luckily for safe operation, it is easy to check the various lights on your car. Burnt out bulbs are easy to spot. However, headlights may be out of alignment without the motorist realizing the fact.

One sign that your headlights may be out of line is having oncoming motorists flash their brights at you. If you know your lights are not on high beam, then your headlights need attention.

Noises Tell Woes of Car

Automobiles can tell you when they need attention — in a colorful language of their own. Here's how to decipher your car's complaints!

Listen, is your car talking to you? No, carburetors can't speak English and your generator never took Spanish lessons.

But the family car does "speak" a language all its own — and can tell you its troubles once you learn to understand this language.

It's your car's way of doing you a favor — warning you that it's time for a service stop before more serious trouble arises.

To help you translate your car's squawks and "backtalk," here's a simplified dictionary of automotive "speech."

Hear a high-pitched, rhythmic chirping like a nestful of hungry robins? It's probably a dry fan belt — an easy matter for your service man to silence.

Once in a while this chirping can be the more serious wail of forgotten generator bearings protesting lack of lubricant. Your mechanic knows how to "feed" your car the oil that will bring soothing relief to your ears.

If your engine misses or idles roughly on a wet morning, you'll probably hear a "snick-snick" noise under the hood; it sounds for all the world like a loud cricket or the breaking of a twig.

This is the sound an electric spark makes when it jumps from a damp spark plug wire to ground on the engine block. Rather than fool around with the wiring yourself, let a trained auto mechanic make sure everything is dry and shipshape — and at the same time have your spark plugs checked.

A startling sound like a woodpecker gone berserk on a metal door, particularly when the engine's cold in the morning, is not an indication of imminent disaster but very likely just a sticky hydraulic valve lifter.

Usually it can be readily silenced by a change to fresh detergent oil and or a special oil additive. However, if your car has solid tappets — and many high-performance automobiles do — an adjustment is probably necessary.

Did you ever toss a handful of BB's down a rainspout? Anyway, you can imagine the racket! If you hear one like it from your engine when accelerating or climbing a hill, you've probably got pre-ignition or spark knock.

The cause can be use of "regular" grade fuel in an engine that's designed for premium, improperly adjusted ignition timing, or deposits of carbon in the engine's combustion chambers that act as unwanted spark plugs.

If you know you're using the correct fuel, better let your service man check into the cause of the knocking. Otherwise you may be wasting gas.

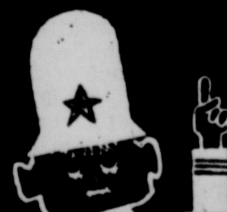

Another bird's chirp — this time beneath the car — can be caused by a dry pinion bearing seal at the rear axle. Prompt servicing can restore peace and quiet.

If, when applying your brakes lightly, you detect the sound of someone scuffing a shoe on a doormat, it could be an out-of-round (slightly oval) brake drum rubbing its high spots on the brake shoes. This is a condition rarely found on a new car, but it's a sure sign of hard wear on a used one.

Keep Car in Good Shape; It Might Save Your Life

A family of three was involved in a highway accident when the driver tried to avoid a stray animal. At 65 mph the car's right wheels moved onto the soft shoulder. The car swerved out of control and struck a tree.

Another car, approaching at about the same speed from the other direction, was forced to drop onto the shoulder but the driver was able to maintain control and bring his car to a safe stop.

While much must be left to conjecture about the true cause of the accident, inspectors concur the car's mechanical condition was a contributory factor. Loose steering parts had prevented the driver from maintaining control. Had the other car's steering been equally worn there might have been a two-car collision.

There has never been an accurate count on the percentage of highway accidents caused at least in part by mechanical failure of the car. Estimates range from under ten per cent to over 50 per cent.

When an emergency arises, the ability to "drive out" of that situation can be the difference between an accident and a scare.

So this becomes a matter of viewpoint: is an accident caused because it is unpreventable? Essentially, yes, say some automotive safety spokesmen. Because the car is an extension of the driver, the driver's ability to avoid an accident may be not better than the car's ability to drive him out of that situation.

It is becoming increasingly apparent that it must be the responsibility of the driver to avoid an accident — even when the situation is created by someone else. The ability to anticipate trouble and avoid it is essential to traffic safety.

There are precious few seconds from the time a driver sees an emergency until his foot depresses the brake pedal. If because of sluggish pedal action it takes another fifth of a second for the brakes to take hold, that car has traveled another car length at 60 mph.

If one tire is excessively soft, the car may pull to one side just a trifle. This then must be corrected by steering slightly in the other direction. Looseness in the steering adds a new element to the problem and may totally eliminate the safety margin.

Still, accident records probably would list this accident as "driver error." While the human element still is primary in accident prevention (or creation) condition of the vehicle may be far more significant than is generally recognized.

L. A. Is Biggest

With close to 3,000,000 passenger cars registered, Los Angeles County leads the nation in number of cars. Only seven other entire states in this country have more cars registered to them than the L.A. area.

Safest Drivers Here

According to the World Health Organization, Americans are the safest drivers on earth. There were 52 deaths per 100 million vehicle miles last year. Japan had the highest toll with 402 deaths per 100 million vehicle miles.

Bad Exhaust Is Dangerous

One of the most common forms of suicide is the inhaling of car exhaust fumes in a closed garage. A very effective killer, one saucerful of pure carbon monoxide is enough to put its victim to sleep forever.

A great deal less than that in a closed car will bring about a headache, nausea and drowsiness; reason enough to keep the exhaust system good and tight.
How do you know if your car is exhaust - safe?

You can't tell much from sniffing because carbon monoxide is odorless. There's no mistaking the sound of a blown muffler or leaking exhaust pipe, of course. First a rumble and then a roar, the noise is your signal that you have waited too long to have the system checked. The best way to be sure about the condition of your car's exhaust system is to have it examined by a competent a lift. His trained eye can spot a serviceman while the car is on the pinholes and other signs of deterioration which are the tipoff that it's time to replace. If your car has not had a new muffler in the past two years, you can expect to replace it soon. Life expectancy runs between two and three years.

Tires: Driver's Best Friend

Safe tires can mean the difference between life and death for a motorist. Surveys have shown that while tires are involved in only about one per cent of all accidents, in more than half these cases the tires were either bald or badly worn.

A tire inspection can be done quickly and easily by just about any driver, man or woman.

To check tire wear, insert a penny in the center grooves. If you can see the top of Lincoln's head, replace the tire.

The newer tires have tread wear indicators built into them which appear as solid bands across the tread surface.

A tire should also be replaced if it shows tread or sidewall cracks deep enough to expose tire ply cords. Other danger signs include bumps, bulges or knots indicating possible separation of sidewall from tire body. The tire should be removed from the wheel and examined by an expert.

Tire valves should be in good condition and be equipped with valve caps. Also rims or wheels which are bent, loose, cracked or otherwise damaged should be replaced. Also replace missing or defective bolts, nuts and lugs.

Tires, even with the best of care, are eventually going to wear out but the smart motorist can do a number of things to insure maximum, safe wear from his tires.

First of all, tires should be rotated regularly. It is suggested by the Rubber Manufacturers Association that the tires be rotated every 5,000 miles.

When flats occur, the tire should be removed from the wheel as quickly as possible. Even driving on the flat for a short distance can destroy the tire.

Another thing on flats...they must be repaired from the inside. Plugs and blowout patches can be used but it must be remembered that they are only temporary repairs. Aerosol type sealants are handy but they are only good for up to 100 miles at no more than 50 miles per hour.

Inflation is perhaps the key word on tire maintenance. Underinflation causes extreme flexing of a tire which builds up heat in direct proportion to speed. The critical point is 250 degrees after which tire failure is real danger.

Over inflation causes tires to run hard and subjects them to impact damages and weakening of the carcass. It also causes excessive wear in the center of the tread.

Proper inflation varies with the ply rating of the tire and its load. There is no industry-wide definition of ply but the word ply seems to be on the way out, being replaced by a "load range" system which uses letters.

Load range B is for the 4-ply tires and maximum inflation recommended is 32 pounds. Load Range C is for 6-ply tires with an inflation of 36 pounds and 40 pounds of pressure is advised for load range D which includes 8-ply tires.

Tire pressure should be checked at least once a month when the tires are cool. Tire pressure can fluctuate, however, but this is considered normal. It is not advised to bleed tires. For turnpike driving it is advised to increase tire pressure about four pounds but within the maximum limits.

When replacing tires it is recommended that the same size be put back on. Never a smaller size. New tires should be broken in by keeping speed under 60 miles per hour for the first 50 miles of driving.

Even with the best of tires driving in the rain or in the winter months can be extremely dangerous. Stopping distances on a wet road can be up to four times the distance on a dry road.

A driver should be especially alert when it first begins to rain. Light rain, or drizzle, especially after a dry spell produces a thin greasy film in the road which is almost as slippery as ice.

Speed and rain don't go together. As water accumulates on the road surface tires begin to "hydroplane or surfboard" as speed increases. The car is actually riding on the water, not on the road. Traction, especially at speeds over 40 miles per hour, is practically nonexistent.

With snow and ice on the roads the most dangerous temperature is around 32 degrees. It's much safer at zero degrees. Studded tires (although outlawed in some states) are considered the best for winter conditions, up to twice as safe as regular tires.

There are a number of mechanical irregularities that can cause uneven tire wear. For the most part, it costs less to have them corrected than it does for a brand new tire.

Mechanical deficiencies include wheels out of balance, improper toe-in or toe-out, improper camber (wheels tilted excessively inward or outward), faulty or "grabbing brakes", and faulty or worn shock absorbers.

All Too Many

Approximately 40 million cars are being driven with defective ignition systems and worn spark plugs according to a survey which involved 174 cities across the nation.

Cheap Repairs Don't Make Sense

Economizing on car maintenance expenses may be costing you more money than it is saving you.

The average U.S. car owner now spends about $13 monthly to maintain his car. Yet, survey after survey shows most cars today are not running at their best. Also, official inspections show that a sizable number have safety defects, according to George M. Galster, Manager of Champion Spark Plug Company's Automotive Technical Service.

Keeping Car in Mint Condition

"In order to keep a car in mechanically - mint condition at all times, an average expenditure of $19 a month is required," said Mr. Galster. "In more than is now being spent."

"We arrived at this by pricing out a list of necessary services spread out over five years, the length of warranties on U.S. cars. Figures are based on maintaining a full - sized V-8 sedan in the low price group with automatic transmission.

"Though he'll spend an added $6 a month, in the long run the typical owner should more than recoup the outlay. Money will come back to the owner (a) at trade - in time and (b) in lower operating costs.

How to Get

Best Gas Mileage.

"By driving with an engine always in tune and with good ignition, he'll realize his full gas mileage potential all the time, and not just when the car is new. And he'll be able to start in any kind of weather.

"By having the front - end always in good alignment — by rotating the tires regularly, and keeping the wheels balanced, tire life will be extended — up to as much as 20 per cent, which is another source of savings.

"At trade - in time," Mr. Galster said, "allowances for cars in mint condition, according to NADA, average at least $235 more than comparable models in just average or fair condition on the first trade - in. That alone amounts to around four dollars a month rebate for the 60 months of ownership."

These figures, according to Mr. Galster, are the result of a year - long study of car maintenance costs by Champion. More than 50 associations and manufacturers were queried.

"Next to the home, the car represents the largest cash investment the average American makes," he declared. "Only by taking care of that investment on a regular basis can it be protected fully. Waiting until you have a few extra dollars to maintain vital parts is an invitation to premature deterioration at best and a dangerous, accident - inviting situation at worst."

Other reasons were cited for following a program of car care. A cared - for car always will be in prime operating condition, minimizing the chance of sudden breakdown at inconvenient times and places.

Also, new car warranties require adherence to maintenance schedules. By living up to warranty requirements, motorists needn't worry about many expensive repairs during keep the car longer than the time specified by the average time, it would provide manufacturers. Should the owner decide to dependable transportation years after the final payment.

Keep Tab on Your Brakes

Few of us ever have had the terrifying experience of sudden and complete brake failure. The brake system usually gives us ample warning of impending trouble. Even a warning can go unheeded, however, when a driver unwittingly adjusts himself to the very slight changes that take place in the brake system day after day. To keep a constant check on the condition of your brakes, follow these three procedures:

1. Test the hydraulic system at least once a week by holding firm pressure on the pedal. If the pedal falls gradually toward the floor, you are losing pressure in one of the wheel cylinders or the master cylinder.

This calls for immediate attention.

2. In a flat, level, open area where you are clear of obstacles, try a hands-off stop at about 30 miles an hour. If the car pulls to one side you may have brake problems. This also may be symptomatic of misaligned wheels or unequal tire inflation, so consider these before you get too deeply involved in brake service. A good mechanic can pinpoint the trouble easily.

3. Have your automotive serviceman perform a complete inspection of the braking system, including linings, drums and hydraulic components at least every six months.

Innocent Battery

Many starting failures listed as battery failures actually are not. The trouble often is caused by abnormal conditions in the ignition system which causes the battery to become run down while the driver is attempting to get the car started.

An untuned car is trouble. --- Trouble you can't afford.

Worn spark plugs in an untuned engine are trouble. Breakdown trouble. Passing and load-hauling trouble. Gas mileage trouble. Trouble enough to spoil your hard-earned vacation.

It's trouble you can avoid by getting a Champion Tune-Up now. Here's how we know.

We tested hundreds of cars including Chevrolets, Fords, Plymouths, Ramblers and other makes that had gone over 10,000 miles without a tune-up. Each of these cars was given a Champion Tune-Up (a new set of Champion spark plugs plus any other basic tune-up items needed). The U.S. Auto Club certified the test results.

The results were just what you'd want. Increased power for safer passing and an average gas savings of over a gallon per tankful.

But the most important thing for you to remember is that a well tuned car assures you of dependable, trouble-free motoring this summer.

Why risk summer driving trouble. Get a Champion Tune-Up at least once a year or every 10,000 miles.

BY HUGH REYNOLDS

City officials are currently figuring percentages in an effort to increase tax revenues without driving property owners to the poorhouse.

Kingston now assesses at 37 per cent of full valuation and fixes a tax rate (for 1968) of $83.66 per thousand. The plan now under serious discussion calls for doubling the percentage of full valuation to 75 per cent and halving the tax rate to around $40 per thousand.

It has been emphasized that this fiscal maneuver would effect a very small minority of taxpayers, about five per cent.

The vast majority would pay basically the same tax as they do now.

The idea is to pick up some of the revenue now lost on G.I. exemptions which totaled $2,820,000 in real property last year. The plan, which could not go into effect before 1970, is expected to net the city another $80,000 in revenue.

In an effort to answer the many questions about the plan, city officials offered the following explanation today, using a figure of $10,000 full property value:

Under the current plan the $10,000 property is assessed at 37 per cent of value, giving a figure of $3,700. This is then multiplied by the tax rate ($83.66) to come up with a tax bill of approximately $310.

The tax would remain basically the same under the new plan, however, G.I.'s would be affected.

Not all veterans claim the exemption but it can go as high as $5,000 which is subtracted from the value of the property.

In the case of the $10,000 property using the 37 per cent figure, the G.I. pays taxes on $3,700. However, with his $5,000 exemption (if he has the full exemption) he pays nothing.

With the new plan, he would be paying taxes on 75 per cent of the $10,000, or $7,500. Figuring his full G.I. exemption, the city has $2,500 it can tax at the new rate of approximately $40. Thus the city derives $100, where it formerly had nothing.

The picking up of G.I. exemption by the city is only a part of a wide-scale plan to increase revenues. Mayor Raymond W. Garraghan sent a communication to the Common Council this month asking for the appointment of a committee on reassessments. That was referred to the Laws and Rules Committee, chaired by Edward Norton (D-Seventh Ward).

The city was last assessed in 1956 by Mayor Frederick Stang but these figures are now considered seriously outdated. The cost of a reassessment has been estimated at $100,000.

Garraghan is also pushing for a county-wide reappraisal and tax map by the legislature. It is felt by some city officials that certain sections of the county are not paying their fair share toward the cost of county government.

Kingston pays about one-third toward the cost of county government, reflected by the $29.16 tax rate per thousand for the county in the city budget this year.

The city figures the best way to drive this county levy down would be a county sales tax.

Kingston currently has its own sales tax which is expected to derive about $325,000 in revenue, or slightly more than $8 per thousand.

Estimates by Garraghan on a three per cent county sales tax range to over $7,000,000 per year, almost the entire amount the county has to currently raise by taxation. The city's share under a county sales tax could drop as low as $6 per thousand, a reduction of $23 from the current rate.

It is expected that the city would drop its two per cent sales tax if the county should adopt its own sales tax, hopefully by September.

A meeting is scheduled tonight at 9 p. m. in the city clerk's office to discuss the city sales tax between the aldermen and the businessmen, the latter led by Frank Reis of the Central Broadway Businessmen's Association and Stanley London of the Uptown Businessmen's Association.

Also on tap for the aldermen is a meeting requested by Garraghan with his city treasurer, Stan Petro, assessor, Mathias Richardson, building inspector, George Radcliffe and former treasurer and current legislator, Orrie Riehl. That one is being scheduled for July 17 in the mayor's office. The department heads will brief the aldermen on Garraghan's plans on assessments.

Dutchess Crash Kills Boy

By WALTER S. CLARK

A 15-year-old New York City boy was killed and three other persons were injured, one critically, early today when the car in which they were riding went out of control on Route 199 in the Town of Pine Plains and crashed into a culvert and trees.

Stolen Car Involved

Dutchess County Sheriff Sergeant Hugh Brennan said the 1964 sedan involved in the mishap at 1:25 a. m. had been reported stolen in New York City on June 27. Authorities in that city were notified the vehicle had been recovered.

Brennan said the operator of the car, Louis A. Lopez, 23, of 14 Jackson Street, New York City, would be charged with criminal negligence in the operation of a motor vehicle resulting in the death of John Peter Baladejo, of 6264 Forsythe Street, New York City.

Investigators from the office of Sheriff Lawrence M. Quinlan said the 15-year-old had been riding in the back seat of the car and the impact after the crash hurled him through the windshield. He was pronounced dead at the scene by Dr. Michael Badeen, an assistant Dutchess County medical examiner, who said the boy died of a fractured skull and broken neck.

The body was removed to the Peck and Peck Funeral Home in Pine Plains.

Frank See, 19, of 118 Horeb Road, Warren, N. J., a passenger in the car, suffered a fracture of the left ankle, broken right arm, multiple lacerations of the face and possible internal injuries. He was reported in critical condition at Vassar Hospital in Poughkeepsie where he was placed in the intensive care unit. It was reported that surgeons were endeavoring to save the youth's right leg.

Also injured in the accident was Wayne Tsetse, 19, of 172 Forsythe Street, New York City. He sustained multiple lacerations, contusions, possible internal injuries and a cerebral concussion.

Dug-in Marines Vow to Remain Until Foe Beaten

By JACK WALSH

SAIGON (UPI)—For the fifth day U.S. Marines today clung to a northern border hill they were supposed to abandon. The Leathernecks have killed at least 300 attacking North Vietnamese and vowed to stay until they kill the rest of the attackers.

"We are going to move off this hill but not until we have defeated the North Vietnamese," said Maj. Gen. Raymond Davis, commander of the 3rd Marine Division which has about 1,000 men atop hill 689.

UPI correspondent Raymond Wilkinson, with the Leathernecks on the jungle mountain just below North Vietnam, reported one charge brought Communist troops surging through the Marine barbed wire.

"The gooks jumped into our trench lines. But we took some antitank weapons and blew them out," Lt. Larry Perry of Dallas, Tex., told Wilkinson. "We set up a hasty defense position and beat them back. But we killed at least 16 in our own trenches."

Elated by a successful weekend summit meeting in Central America, President Lyndon B. Johnson relaxed today at his Texas ranch while preparing for a trip to the Pacific to talk the problems of war and peace with South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu.

Hill 689—named for its height in meters (2,230 feet)—overlooks Khe Sanh, the fort which the Marines abandoned five days ago in order to give themselves more maneuverability. The North Vietnamese surged toward the hill 689 outpost, apparently sensing an easy capture of the American outpost they had never been able to budge.

Davis had about 200 Marines atop the height. He sent in about 800 more men. The North Vietnamese began a mortar and rocket barrage and charged. Since Friday they have been cutting them down.

The battle of hill 689 formed one part of a broad spread along just below the North-South Vietnam Demilitarized Zone (DMZ). Demonstrating their greater mobility, Marine forces were sweeping the area, blocking Communist infiltration routes and killing another 230 Red troops.

In other developments:

—In the Saigon area, where allied commanders have predicted a major Communist assault, U.S. troops killed 21 guerrillas Monday. B52 Stratofortresses continued pounding Viet Cong positions. U.S. Navy patrol boats sank three guerrilla supply sampans.

—U.S. jets flew 140 missions Monday against North Vietnam's southern panhandle supply lines. Communist gunfire downed an Air Force F4C Phantom but a helicopter safely rescued the two crewmen who had parachuted.

—South Vietnam spokesmen said 293 of their troops were killed and 597 wounded in action last week. They said South Vietnamese forces killed 482 Communists last week. In the same period, they said 1,174 Communist rocket and mortar rounds were seized near Saigon.

Viet Cong guerrillas sprayed a nauseating type gas around a government outpost in the Mekong Delta at nightfall Monday and pressed an attack that dealt its militiamen defenders "moderate" casualties, military spokesmen said today.

South Vietnamese soldiers, four of them vomiting blood and many others nauseated, beat off the assault on the Ong De outpost, 58 miles southwest of Saigon in the delta, the Communists losses were not given. The term "moderate" casualties meant any more government losses would have seriously endangered the defense of the small outpost.

GUNS—Celler Makes Move

WASHINGTON (AP) — A leading congressional advocate of federal registration and licensing of guns has taken a major step toward killing a bill to achieve that goal.

Rep. Emanuel Celler, D-N.Y., chairman of the House Judiciary Committee told the House Rules Committee Monday he would oppose any effort to pass a registration and licensing bill if it would endanger a proposal to ban the mail-order sale of rifles and shotguns.

The Rules Committee had the mail-order bill before it today. "While I'm in favor of registration and licensing," Celler said, "I'm anxious to get a rule, by which he meant he wanted the proposal in mail-order sales sent to the House floor.

He went on: "In order to get a rule, I'm willing to oppose any amendment offered on the floor of the House dealing with registration and licensing. In conference, I will oppose any attempt to add registration as an amendment to this bill."

President Johnson had proposed to Congress that the ban on the mail-order sale of pistols contained in the recently passed omnibus crime bill be extended to rifles and shotguns. He also asked for the registration of all guns and the licensing of their owners.

Celler was joined by Rep. William M. McCulloch of Ohio, ranking Republican on the Judiciary Committee in opposing the registration bill.

McCulloch said he would oppose the registration bill "without qualification. I am fearful that registration legislation at this time would endanger this bill."

He also told the committee he would not have made such a statement "had not I felt that the overwhelming majority if not all the minority felt that way," referring to the Republican members of the judiciary committee.

Several members of the rules committee indicated they could vote for a ban on sales but would oppose the registration of firearms.

Celler and McCulloch would be part of the House team to iron out any differences in the Senate conference in bills passed by the two bodies.

If opposed to any measure they could prevent any agreement between the House and the Senate.

Chairman William M. Colmer of the House Rules Committee said he expected a bill banning the interstate sales of firearms to pass the House but he believed it would be weakened by amendments from the floor.

He said many such amendments had been suggested during the hearing of his committee which lasted some six hours Monday, even though the meeting was broken up often by roll call votes on the floor.

Several witnesses appearing before Colmer's committee opposed giving the measure a rule which would prevent it from reaching the floor.

In the Senate Monday, Atty. Gen. Ramsey Clark testified before the juvenile delinquency subcommittee and said "the ghost of abolition" provides no excuse for failing to pass firearms registration and licensing legislation.

Clark said he knows of no responsible group advocating complete abolition of private ownership of firearms.

The parent Senate Judiciary Committee is to take up the gun control question Wednesday. The committee scheduled the meeting two weeks ago after it bogged down in debate over whether to tack registration and licensing to a mail order ban on long guns and ammunition—a dilemma similar to that confronting the House Rules Committee.

Southern Ulster Highways On the Legislature Agenda

BY ALBERT J. CAWEIN

A six-point state highway improvement study, regulation and control of billboards, stronger penalties for littering and a county recreation commission will be among the major items on the agenda of the County Legislature Thursday night.

The widening, improvement or reconstruction of six major state highways in southern Ulster County and the construction of a new Thruway interchange in the Town of Plattekill has been proposed in a resolution to be introduced by Joseph Martorana, R-9th District.

Study Conditions

Legislator Martorana's resolution calls for a study of current conditions of all state highways and systems in the county with the aim of making recommendations for improvements to the state. These recommendations, Martorana noted, should be included in the state-wide comprehensive transportation plan which the state commissioner of transportation is developing.

Martorana cites the need for improvement in the area which he represents including the Towns of Lloyd, Marlboro, Plattekill and Shawangunk. He lists six major sections which he recommends should be widened and improved including resurfacing and reconstruction where necessary to eliminate hazardous curves.

They include Route 44-55 from Route 9W in Highland west to the Shawangunk Mountains; Route 9W from north of Highland, south through Highland and Marlboro to the Orange County line; Route 299 from Route 9W north of Highland, west to the State Thruway interchange at New Paltz, widening to four lanes; Route 32 from Modena north to New Paltz; Route 208 from the junction of Routes 203 and 300, south through Walkkill to the Orange line and Route 32 from Pine Bush, west through Walker Valley to Route 209 in Ellenville.

The resolution also cites the need for an additional Thruway interchange in the Town of Plattekill, either at the crossing of Route 32 or at the Route 44-55 crossing in Ardonia. This is midway between the Newburgh and New Paltz interchanges. As this is an east-west artery it will meet the needs of the driving public and add tremendously to the economy and growth of southern Ulster County, the legislator said.

The resolution also calls for a study to be made for all areas by the Bridge and Highway Committee and suggests the committee work with county and local elected officials and further submit its findings to the County Legislature for ultimate recommendations to the state.

Minority Leader Roger W. Mabie, D-7th District, will introduce a resolution suggesting an increase in the fine for littering up to $250 for each offense. The proposal urges all law enforcement officials at every level to make a concerted drive to punish offenders.

His resolution cites the wasted effort made by county highway departments to collect litter. He notes that Ulster County Highway Department picked up 206 truck loads of trash along county roads recently and Town of Esopus Highway Department has collected 79 truck loads along town roads.

Ray Appeal to Be Heard

LONDON (UPI)—A British court said today it will hear James Earl Ray's appeal against extradition to the United States to stand trial for the slaying of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., on July 29.

The surprise announcement was made when Ray appeared at Bow Street Magistrate's Court on charges of violating British gun and immigration laws.

The announcement on the extradition appeal had been unexpected as the appearance today was supposed to deal only with the gun and passport charges.

Egypt, Israel Trade Shots

CAIRO (UPI)—Israel and Egypt duelled with artillery across the southern tip of the Suez Canal Monday in the longest cross-canal exchange in nine months, Egyptian military spokesmen said today.

The 2 1/2 hour exchange began when Israel opened fire on the city of Suez, wounding several civilians, damaging houses and setting fires, the Egyptians said.

Returning the fire, Egypt's guns inflicted heavy casualties on the Israelis and destroyed five Israeli tanks, two artillery observation posts and one ammunition dump, the spokesman said.

Book Causes Trial Delay

DETROIT (AP)—A criminal court judge in Detroit sharply rapped a recently published book Monday and agreed to delay the murder trial of a white Detroit policeman accused of slaying a Negro youth during last July's riot.

Judge Robert Colombo said from the bench he thought John Hersey's "The Algiers Motel Incident," published last month, was "designed to deliberately be released at a time that would prevent a fair and impartial trial in this case."

Dog Trips Boy--- Death

CROWN POINT, N. Y. (AP)—A 13-year-old boy was killed Monday when struck by a Delaware and Hudson train after he and a companion had tried to retrieve fishing poles left on a railroad trestle near this village beside Lake Champlain.

State Police said Robert B. Williams of Crown Point tripped over a pet dog running beside him on the trestle.

The companion, John J. Landry, also 13 and of Crown Point, was not injured.

NAACP to Act On Any Bias

By HUGH REYNOLDS

The NAACP will forward a resolution through Alderman Joseph Epstein (D - Sixth Ward) asking the Common Council to give the mayor the power to cancel municipal building contracts when discriminatory practices are proven.

Action was taken at last night's meeting of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People at New Central Baptist Church on the Strand.

Everett Hodge, president, said such laws are in effect in New Rochelle and New York City. He added that he has met with officials from the Department of Housing and Urban Development who assured him that federal funds would be held up in the event of communication from the discrimination against anyone for race, color or creed. The group is also drafting a proposal to the Building Trades Council which comprises carpenters, masons, plumbers and electricians calling for on the job training programs for Negroes.

Hodge said, "Unions have prevented many Negroes from joining and now they must pay the price." It was noted that the NAACP could act most effectively on construction projects financed wholly or in part with federal and state funds.

The Kingston Area Chamber of Commerce received the approval of the group for its plan to spend $10,000 for two men to establish a job program that federal funds would be held up in the event of communication from the Chamber was read stating that 12 persons from the low-income sector of the community have been employed under the Chamber's job program.

Negro youth was also discussed in some detail with Hodge asking for a meeting with Negro clergy and the NAACP in an effort to establish better lines of communication between the youth and their elders.

Discrimination in local restaurants against Negroes was also discussed with the group agreeing that any complaints should be carefully checked out either through the NAACP or the Kingston Human Relations Commission. Irving Bell is the chairman of the commission and is also a member of the NAACP Executive Board.

Final reports were given on the talent show for the benefit of the youth program which was held May 31. More than $80 was realized with money still coming in. One of the contributions was a $10 check from Mayor Raymond W. Garraghan.

Fish Hammers On Crime Issue

"No wonder by opponent shouts 'political baloney' in response to my remarks on the subject of crime," Hamilton Fish Jr. told the Schenectady County Republican Committee. "Every Democrat office holder and candidate is extremely vulnerable on this issue."

"Crime has increased at an all-time high rate during the Kennedy-Johnson administration."

Fish, who is the Republican candidate for Congress in the 28th District, pointed out that Johnson's own justice department said that crime had increased 88 per cent in the last seven years. "This is absolutely intolerable," said Fish. "Especially as compared with the first seven years of the Eisenhower administration when there was an increase of only 43 per cent - less than half of the increase under the Democrat administration."

Fish suggested that his opponent stop "his irresponsible name calling and stop playing fast and loose with the facts."

"The real facts are that under Republicans there was less crime and also a much smaller increase in crime," Fish concluded.

Onteora Meeting On School Petition

The Onteora Citizens Committee will meet tonight at 8 in the Parish Hall, St. Francis de Sales Church, Phoenicia, to consider petitioning the Onteora Board of Education to take the necessary steps to do away with its recently invoked austerity budget.

Onteora voters, twice in recent months, turned down other proposed budgets.

Under an austerity program certain services are necessarily curtailed according to the state education law. Some bus transportation, cafeteria service, book purchases as well as some other instructional and custodial equipment will be deleted from the program.

The only way any service may be restored would be to bring the austerity budget before the voting public with options or, vote an entirely new budget.

Before the last budget vote in June, the citizen's committee urged area residents to vote "yes."

The presently adopted austerity budget is $3,750,000, down $167,000 from the original budget proposed in May. The Onteora Board, at a re-organizational meeting July 2, instituted the austerity budget and did not set a date for further voting.

Dr. Harold Snyder, superintendent of schools, commented after the last defeat, that only five per cent put the measure down.

Pitchfork Attacker Is Sought

Attacked by a bearded long haired man with a pitchfork after he surprised the intruder in a bathroom on the property of Lomala Corp. in the Dutchess County community of Hopewell Junction at 8:30 p. m. Monday, Vernon Lindblom, 63, was seriously injured.

Fishkill State police sent out all-state alarms on the teletype seeking the apprehension of the assailant of Lindblom, who was admitted to Highland Hospital in Beacon suffering a broken right clavicle and lacerations of the ears.

Troopers described the much-sought man as white male, about 30 to 40 years of age, six feet tall, medium build. He has long black hair and a heavy beard. The suspect was wearing greenish clothes.

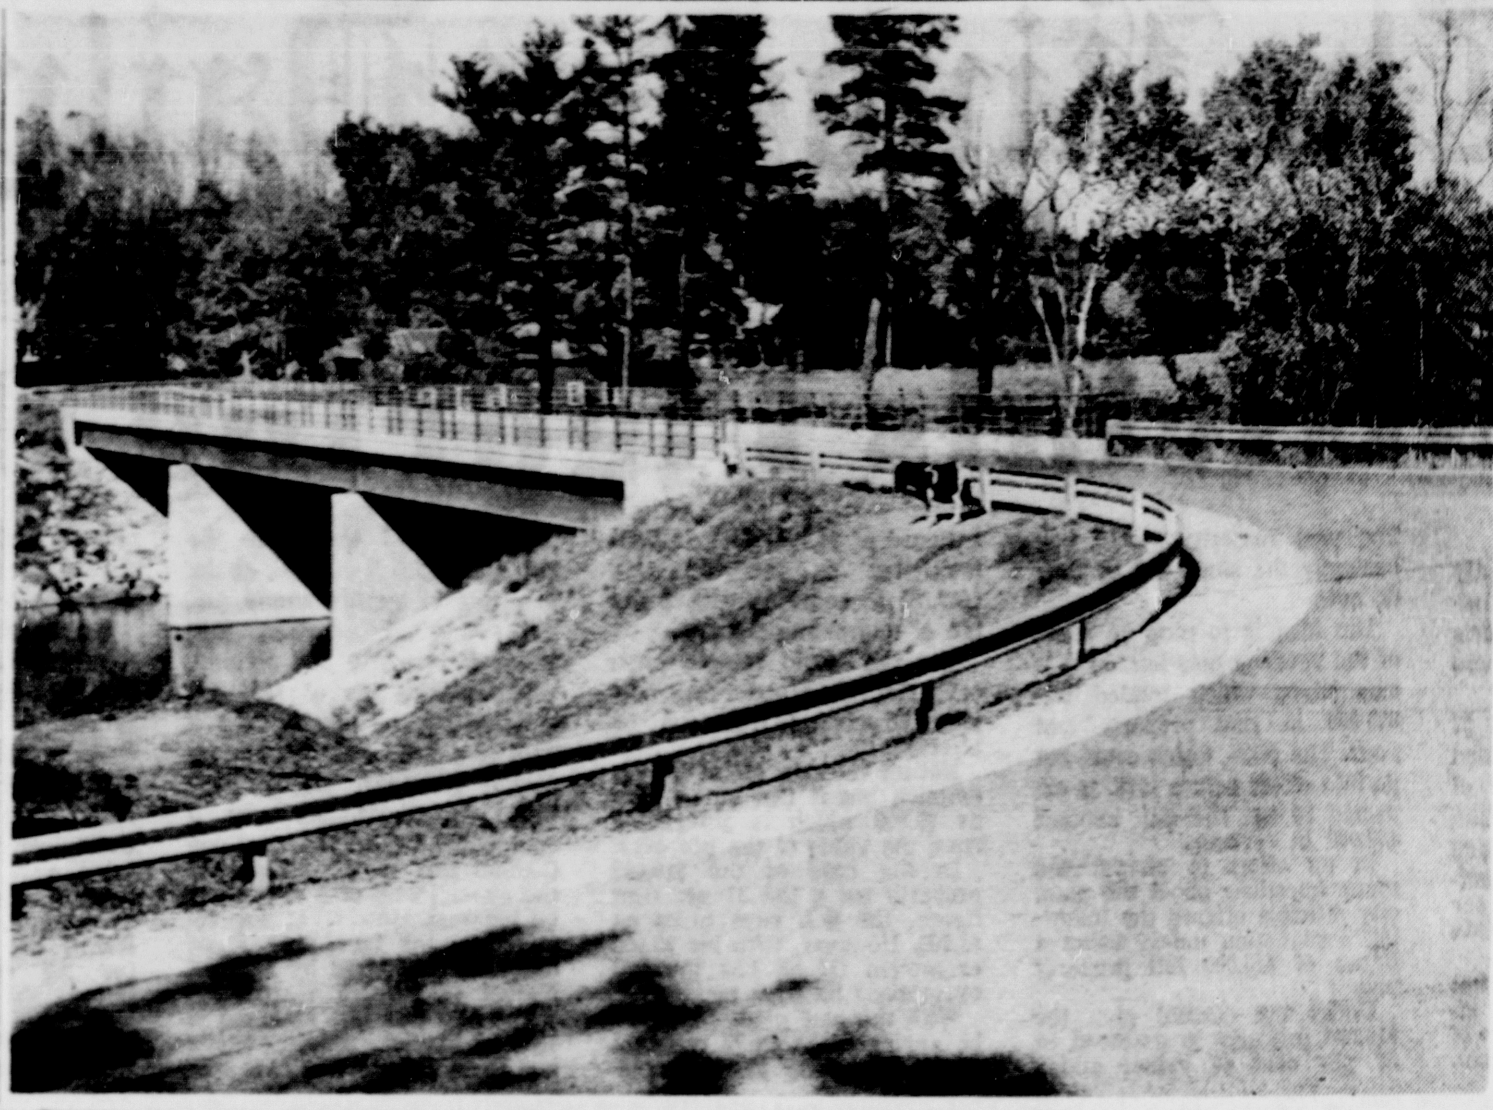

Lindblom told BCI officers of the Fishkill State police that he went to the bathroom on the Lomala property to check the building. As he opened an interior door he was accosted by the man who slugged him with the pitchfork and then fled on foot.

Troopers reported the man was carrying a knapsack and other clothing and he took the pitchfork with him when he disappeared. Troopers requested the public to immediately notify Fishkill State Police if the fugitive is seen. Authorities said residents of Hopewell Junction had reported they had seen the man in the area on Sunday and Monday.

Surrenders

Carrying his 12-week-old son, Leslie Wallace Mellish and his bride, Beryl, 19, leave their besieged home in Sydney, Australia in the company of Police Chief Norman Allen, and Police Supt. Don Fergusson. Mellish, a 23-year-old ex-convict, had kept 70 policemen at bay eight days while holding his bride and son as hostages. He had previously agreed to surrender if allowed to marry Beryl but the siege continued after the wedding. After surrendering, Mellish said he wanted to fight in Vietnam. (UPI CABLEPHOTO).

Gunman Gives Up After Eight Days

SYDNEY, Australia (UPI)—A young gunman who kept 70 police at bay for eight days today surrendered, marching from the siege house with the teen-aged bride and baby he held hostage. Wallace "Wally" Mellish announced he wants to fight in Vietnam.

"They should have left him in the asylum," said Wally's mother. But Police Chief Norman Allan of New South Wales smiled as he led Mellish, 23, his shotgun bride Beryl, 19, and 12-week-old Leslie across a lawn cut by riot squad foxholes. Allan had been criticized for agreeing—under the gunman's threat of mass murder—to witness Wally's marriage to Beryl and supplying him with an armor piercing M16 automatic rifle.

The chief's tactics of pacifying Mellish paid off when Wally telephoned Sydney Radio Station WSM and broadcast that he would surrender if given a medical examination at the Australian army recruiting office.

Wally had promised at the outset of the siege—he chased away two warrant servers—to surrender if allowed to marry Beryl. Allan had agreed and then Wally demanded 90 minutes with his bride and Allan had again agreed. Then Wally demanded a one-night honeymoon in the siege cottage and Allan agreed. But, although the chief had supplied Coca-Cola and chocolate cookies for the wedding and himself as witness, the gunman still refused to surrender.

When Allan went back into the house to plead for surrender, Wally demanded and got the M16 rifle plus 200 bullets and threatened once more to shoot himself, Beryl and Leslie. The siege continued. But today Allan agreed to the medical examination. After all, police psychiatrists had wanted another chance at Mellish, a car thief they had treated during his many jailings for burglary and theft. A minister and Detective Superintendent Don Fergusson went into the house. And out came Mellish, Beryl and baby.

Sirhan Is Moved To New Building

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Sirhan Bishara Sirhan has been secretly whisked to a cell in the Hall of Justice, where he will face trial on charges of murdering Sen. Robert F. Kennedy.

A convoy of patrol cars manned by seven deputies from the Central Jail, completed the move Sunday. Sheriff Peter J. Pitchess announced Monday. The 14-minute move was so secret not even Russell E. Parsons, Sirhan's attorney, knew about it.

"We knew it was coming," said one of Parsons' aides, "but the time was a secret even from us."

The transfer was accomplished in a routine manner and was part of an over-all previously scheduled program of security for the inmate," Pitchess said.

The 24-year-old Jordanian immigrant's new 6-by-8 feet cell is on the 13th floor in the Hall of Justice.

The Hall of Justice's jail quarters have undergone a complete renovation, accelerated because of the Sirhan case. Sirhan's cell is in an isolated corridor with no outside windows and no other prisoners. It is equipped with a bunk fixed to the wall, a toilet, wash basin and a 12-inch circular mirror attached to the wall.

A larger security area for visitors adjoins the cell. It has bars and sliding doors and a 20-by-30-inch window in one wall. Sirhan and visitors can look at one another through the window and talk by telephone.

"This way there's no chance of passing anything," said a sheriff's aide. Sirhan is charged with killing Kennedy on June 5 at the Ambassador Hotel during the senator's victory celebration following the California Democratic presidential primary. He also is charged with wounding five people in the hall of gunfire that cut down Kennedy.

Sirhan is to enter a plea on July 19. Since his arraignment the day of the shooting, he has been in an 8-by-10 feet cell at the Central Jail.

Rusk to Testify
Johnson's message coincided with an appearance by Secretary of State Dean Rusk before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

Johnson signed the treaty July 1 and made a dramatic announcement of forthcoming exchanges with the Soviet Union on limitation and cutback of offensive and defensive rockets.

The Texas White House also said arrangements were being made with the Thieu government to set a place and time for the Pacific meeting.

Honolulu, American Samoa and Manila have been mentioned as possible sites. The two presidents were expected to meet within the next two weeks. The White House aides were letting the announcements come from Saigon, but Johnson apparently had been getting ready for the meeting for some time.

Johnson, tanned and jovial, was all smiles as he finished up his Central American tour. The people turned out in droves to see Johnson. It was the first time a president of the United States had visited several of the countries, and national holidays were proclaimed in some for Johnson's appearance.

At all stops Johnson stressed hopes for regional economic and political unity among Central American states.

LBJ Plans for Pacific Trip

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (UPI)—President Johnson, elated by a successful weekend summit meeting and by greeting from wildly cheering crowds as he hedge-hopped his way home through Central America, relaxed today at his Texas ranch before flying to Washington tonight.

But around his preparations began for another trip, this one to the Pacific to talk the problems of war and peace with South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu.

Johnson stopped at the LBJ Ranch for a brief respite after an exhilarating 5,900 mile safari topping off a visit to San Salvador.

The President gave the presidents of Nicaragua, Costa Rica, Honduras and Guatemala a ride home on the presidential jet and made ceremonial calls at their countries' airports. Thousands showed up at the guarded airports to welcome Johnson with homemade signs, American flags and festive music.

In business at home the President today planned to send the Senate a message from the ranch urging early ratification of the United Nations treaty to ban the spread of nuclear weapons.

Fiscal 1969 Bows Tardily

As fiscal 1969 began at midnight last Sunday, only one of the 13 money bills necessary for the operation of the United States government had passed the House. The House Appropriations Committee had completed work on eight more. Four others awaited authorization legislation. So far behind was this schedule, that the House approved a resolution permitting Federal agencies to continue spending, else the wheels of government would have stalled.

The main reason for this wait and see game is that Congress does not want to make cuts of $6 billion in spending which it ordered as the price of the 10 per cent income tax surtax it had just voted. Among those bills still to come are money bills for defense, foreign aid, military construction and the District of Columbia, totaling more than $85 billion in new spending requests.

The Appropriation Committee reported that House action on money bills so far had cut spending by nearly $2 billion. The Senate may restore some of the cuts. What spending cuts the Congress does not make, the President must under the tax and spending legislation.

However, Rep. Thomas B. Curtis, Missouri Republican, told the House that he was persuaded by White House statements that President Johnson has no intention of cutting spending in the fiscal year just started. "Possibly impeachment proceedings are the only way to bring the President in line," Curtis said.

No one believes that it will come to that. The road block is in spending for the poor. Congress does not want to touch it, and the President has shown no desire to do so either. Rep. George H. Mahon, chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, points out that the Federal Government spent $25 billion to help the poor in the last fiscal year and will spend $26 billion to $27 billion for this purpose in the new fiscal year. It is political dynamite to cut that.

Money is going to flow through Congress by billions when it returns Wednesday after the holiday, so that the Government can function. We'll see who will cut that $6 billion, Congress or the President, or if Curtis is right, neither.

LSD Users Run Scared

If throwing a scare into the public hasn't made much of a dent in the nation's tobacco habit as yet, the tactic appears to have had sudden and dramatic effect in another area of considerable concern in health quarters.

The U.S. Bureau of Narcotics reports a sharp decline in LSD usage in the wake of revelations during the past year of the mind-bending drug's effect on human reproduction—which probably says something about survival of the race being a more telling argument than personal survival.

The bureau says the turning point came with evidence that LSD can disrupt the arrangement of chromosomes—the tiny rods in cells containing the multitudes of genes determining human development from sex to hair color and number of fingers.

The reports of medical researchers and of actual abnormal birth "scared the pants off" of many taking LSD for kicks or to be in, the bureau believes, with a resulting "substantial" usage decline in recent months.

Victory is not total. There are still many hard-core addicts and many former users, primarily the collegiate set, may simply have turned to marijuana. But every little bit helps.

Newspapers, by widely reporting the chromosome peril, are given considerable credit for LSD's downfall.

Who says there isn't good news to report—or that reporting bad news can't have beneficial results?

On the Plus Side

Next time you start worrying about the younger generation let these facts come into your mind.

In what is becoming a spring tradition in California, 80,000 high school graduates held all-night frolics at Disneyland this year. Five nights the park was thronged from 11 p.m. until 5 a.m. by classes from a total of 308 schools.

While Disneyland makes it plain to the kids that they'll stand for no nonsense, officials in charge say they have less trouble with them than they have with some adults.

Ralph Nader, the safety advocate, charged the Department of Interior with footdragging in eliminating hazards in mining. To Secretary Stewart Udall's answer, that hundreds of closure orders to correct unsafe conditions have been handed down in recent years, Nader said there have been hundreds of thousands of violations of advisory codes because they did not have the force of law.

"It'll Never Get Off the Ground!"

Why Hasn't Warren Given Definite Date?

WASHINGTON — Many questions were left unanswered by the extraordinary interview which Chief Justice Earl Warren granted to the press last Friday. Although justices of the highest court in the land are not supposed to talk politics, Mr. Warren himself refused to answer some questions in that category, he nevertheless took occasion to express his opinion publicly on the merits of the two candidates for the Supreme Court selected by President Johnson. This comes at a time when a distinctly political controversy is going on in the Senate of the United States with respect to those same appointments.

Already several members of the Senate have ascribed political motives to Chief Justice Warren for submitting his letter of retirement at this time, instead of waiting until a new president has been inaugurated next January.

Certainly the Senate Committee on the Judiciary hasn't had the chance as yet to consider whether Justice Fortas and Judge Thornberry—who have announced as probable nominees for the vacancies when they do occur—should or should not be appointed. Nor has there been any opportunity for the other justices of the high court to express themselves. Indeed, it is most unusual for a member of the court to venture to evaluate publicly any prospective nominees to the bench.

So it was surprising that Chief Justice Warren volunteered a comment on the possible appointment of Justice Fortas for Chief Justice. He spoke favorably of him, as having a good record as a lawyer and as having served on the high court for three years, then added: "I can't imagine a better background for a Chief Justice than that."

But there are other Associate Justices now on the high court who have served a longer period than Mr. Fortas. They come from both political parties. Did they not deserve consideration?

There is, for instance, Justice Byron White, who at 51 has served six years on the court. Potter Stewart is 53 and has been an Associate Justice for nine years, while William J. Brennan Jr., 62, has been on the Supreme Court for 11 years. William O. Douglas has been an Associate Justice for 29 years, and John M. Harlan has served 14 years. Both are 69 years of age.

Thus each of these men is at least eight years younger than Chief Justice Warren and has served at least three years longer on the Supreme Court than Mr. Fortas. Also, Mr. Fortas is five years older than Justice Stewart and seven years older than Justice White.

It isn't clear either just why

Chief Justice Warren hasn't given a definite date for his retirement and has preferred instead to leave the question open so that he may stay in office if the Senate fails to confirm the men who now are being considered for the two posts. In fact, Mr. Warren intimates that he could continue indefinitely as Chief Justice if the President and the Senate carry on a prolonged controversy about confirming Messrs. Fortas and Thornberry.

It now is being asked whether the Senate Judiciary Committee will have the opportunity to elicit from members of the bar their opinions as to the qualifications of other men on the bench who might be chosen in the event that the two nominations presented by President Johnson are voted down or eliminated by a filibuster.

The inadequacy of the present system is illustrated by the fact that the President of the United States can appoint one of his closest friends to be Chief Justice of the United States without any opportunity being afforded for consideration of other judges who may have been much better qualified for the post. The real question is whether the American people are entitled to have the ablest persons as Chief Justice and Associate Justices, instead of being compelled to accept the political cronies of a President who in a few months is to leave the White House.

Conversely, within Spain, Franco's proudest boast—"We were the first European nation to fight communism, and to win"—still profitably identifies him among countless millions. This combines with his profit as the man who kept the people out of World War II.

Many Spaniards want internal changes. The list includes land reform, education reform, anti-monopoly measures, press freedoms and more freedoms for workers to organize, better wages and lower living costs.

A wise Spaniard once called his native land a dulce anarquia—a gentle anarchy. The surface is sometimes calm, deceptively so; but the normal Spaniard is everlastingly a conflict: It is, however, a compartmentalized country by nature in its provinces and the pressures are not unified. The common denominators nationwide are the church and the army, both of which likewise want changes—but, like the overwhelming majority of Spaniards, only if the changes can come without violence. More than 1½ million Spaniards died in their last civil war. They are appalled at any thought of another.

An internally threatened Spain would probably rally behind Franco on no less surprising scale than France did behind de Gaulle.

Generalissimo Francisco Franco y Bahamonde, five feet three, now 76, only two years younger than de Gaulle, became in 1926 the youngest general in Western Europe at the age of 34.

Time, of course, is overtaking his survival. In fact, the cry, "Viva Franco—Arriba Spain," is now shortened to only "Arriba Spain" in government radio sign-offs. You hear it widely said abroad, as about de Gaulle, especially among their hopeful enemies, that Franco is in bad health. There is no evidence whatever.

He has a notorious dislike of Madrid, and all urban centers. His power seat is the Palace of El Prado, 15 miles to the northwest, where I first interviewed him a full 25 years ago, the first interview he ever gave after the civil war. Also, Franco remains longer now at his Galicia villa on the winding coastal road to remote Meiras. But, like de Gaulle, he has an uncanny ability to play off attacking groups, ruin their positions, and emerge unscathed, and often even stronger. And he will note to you with some irony that in this country of fiery temperaments famous for its bull-ringing call of "Mata! Mata!"—"Kill him! Kill him!"—he moves much more freely and exposed than does President Johnson in the United States.

Franco's claim to constitutional legitimacy rests on a national referendum of July, 1947. It "approved" in overwhelming majority his designation as lifelong ruler ("By the Grace of God, Caudillo of Spain"), the abolition of Spain's republican form of government, inherited from 1831, and the restoration of a monarchy—but without a king.

Spain is thus a constitutional monarchy, with Franco holding the power to designate a king to succeed him. But, like de Gaulle, Franco loves power. He is also in the traditional pattern of the Spanish general whose ambition is to save his country by becoming its ruler.

No, I think Franco will try to stay in command as long as he is alive and then be buried as chief of state at the incredible tomb complex called the Valley of the Fallen, with its great bronze doors of 11 tons each and its huge granite cross a football-field high, expressing the soul of Spain, beautiful and severe.

Meanwhile, the weakening result of our NATO allies' blackball is the kind of luxury we can no longer afford while we pour our own people's billions of dollars into Europe's defense.

Drew Pearson Says Gun Bill Backers Muff Chance to Win Battle

WASHINGTON — Passage of laws for the American people sometimes turns on very little things. The other day the passage of a gun control bill turned on the fact that three Senators were not willing to spend a few extra minutes in the Senate Judiciary Committee. The gun control bill lost.

The Judiciary Committee was considering the Tydings gun control bill, which has the backing of men such as Sen. Mike Mansfield of Montana but the bitter opposition of the National Rifle Association. It provides that each state shall be given time to work out its own gun registration system before the federal government steps in. President Johnson favors a stronger bill requiring federal registration from the start.

Sponsoring the former bill along with Tydings were Sens. George Smathers, D-Fla., and Hugh Scott, R-Pa. Also strongly backing the bill was Sen. Teddy Kennedy, D-Mass., brother of the two men who were victims of the assassin's bullet.

The Senate Judiciary Committee is strongly stacked with Southern fundamentalists and Republican vocalists for the gun lobby. They range from Big Jim Eastland of Mississippi to John McClellan of Arkansas and Sam Ervin of North Carolina, among the Southern fundamentalists, to Roman Hruska of Nebraska, the rootin', tootin' spokesman for the National Rifle Association who has been doing his best to delay any legislation. He figures that the longer the delay, the more the assassination of Bobby Kennedy in Los Angeles will be forgotten.

In between there are Quentin Burdick of North Dakota, the quiet spokesman for prairie pheasant game hunters, and Ed Long of Missouri, who has a hard time making up his mind on gun control. When gun control was debated in the Judiciary Committee the other day, all these anti-control men were present. But three backers of the bill were not.

Sen. Tydings argued eloquently. He also used the telephone. Frantically he called two co-sponsors of the bill, Smathers of Florida and Scott of Pennsylvania. They said they would come for the vote. But somehow or other they never arrived.

Tydings also called Ted Kennedy, a member of the committee, who was passionately, tragically interested in gun control. Teddy wanted to be told a few minutes before the Judiciary Committee vote so he could get there at the last minute. But he never arrived.

The gun control bill, which it was hoped would discourage more assassinations such as those of President Kennedy, Sen. Robert Kennedy, and Martin Luther King, was stymied in committee by a 7 to 5 vote. If the three Senators who favored the legislation had taken the trouble to be present, the vote would have been the other way around.

Another vote is due in the Judiciary Committee this week. It will be interesting to see whether the three Senators this time are present.

This column may have been too optimistic when we reported on July 4 that the old era of Joe McCarthyism is no more.

Almost before that column was published, a telephone barrage, similar to that operated by Richard Nixon's campaign managers when he first defeated Rep. Jerry Voorhees for Congress, was buzzing over the telephone lines in Washington. The Nixon technique, used both against Voorhees and later Helen Gahagan Douglas, was to charge them with being pro-communist.

The same technique, coupled with anti-Semitism, was used this time against Abe Fortas, to block his confirmation to the Supreme Court. Those who dialed 528-4357 listened to a message from the National Socialist White People's party pouring out a stream of anti-Semitic hate against Fortas.

"In this nation of 150 million white Aryans," said the telephone message, "it seems that Mr. Johnson couldn't find a single qualified person to fill that important post. Instead he dug up this despicable Jew with a high record that smells to high heaven, and what a record it is. Here are some of the highlights:

"Fortas was for a period associated with the National Lawyers Guild, a notorious communist front cited by the Attorney General of the United States. He was publicly associated with the known Soviet agents Alger Hiss and Harry Dexter White.

"Fortas was instrumental in bringing about the Supreme Court school busing decision whereby millions of helpless white children are delivered each school day into the hands of young Negro hoodlums and rapists in thousands of blackboard jungles across the nation. It was Abe Fortas who cast the decisive fifth vote in the infamous Miranda vs. Arizona decision.

"There is too much in the Fortas record to list here. If you are a white American concerned about the growing anti-white trend in this country, contact the National Socialist White People's Party.

"We need your support. This has been another in a continuing series of white power messages."

Note—The 18 GOP Senators in addition to Griffin are: Allott, Colo., Baker, Tenn., Bennett, Utah, Carlson, Kans., Cotton, N. H., Curtis, Neb., Fannin, Ariz., Fong, Hawaii, Hansen, Wyo., Jordan, Idaho, Miller, Iowa, Morton, Ky., Mundt, S. D., Murphy, Calif., Thurmond, S. C., Tower, Tex., Williams, Del., and Young, N. D.

Henry J. Taylor Says

NATO Allies Blackball Spain

Defense Secretary Clark M. Clifford wisely revived behind the scenes the question of Spain at the recent NATO meeting in Brussels. Including Spain in NATO has always been a strategic imperative, especially since President Charles de Gaulle withdrew France, but the country has been blackballed by internal European politics. Mr. Clifford could only make another sensible feeler, although Spain is no suppliant for this.

Thanks largely to Spain's Latin-American support, she was finally admitted to full United Nations membership in 1955. But at the dangerous insistence of Denmark, Holland, Norway and the powerful Communist party in Italy, the NATO opponents of Spain's entrance prefer a dislike for Francisco Franco to the protection of their own countries.

Conversely, within Spain, Franco's proudest boast—"We were the first European nation to fight communism, and to win"—still profitably identifies him among countless millions. This combines with his profit as the man who kept the people out of World War II.

Many Spaniards want internal changes. The list includes land reform, education reform, anti-monopoly measures, press freedoms and more freedoms for workers to organize, better wages and lower living costs.

A wise Spaniard once called his native land a dulce anarquia—a gentle anarchy. The surface is sometimes calm, deceptively so; but the normal Spaniard is everlastingly a conflict: It is, however, a compartmentalized country by nature in its provinces and the pressures are not unified. The common denominators nationwide are the church and the army, both of which likewise want changes—but, like the overwhelming majority of Spaniards, only if the changes can come without violence. More than 1½ million Spaniards died in their last civil war. They are appalled at any thought of another.

An internally threatened Spain would probably rally behind Franco on no less surprising scale than France did behind de Gaulle.

Generalissimo Francisco Franco y Bahamonde, five feet three, now 76, only two years younger than de Gaulle, became in 1926 the youngest general in Western Europe at the age of 34.

Time, of course, is overtaking his survival. In fact, the cry, "Viva Franco—Arriba Spain," is now shortened to only "Arriba Spain" in government radio sign-offs. You hear it widely said abroad, as about de Gaulle, especially among their hopeful enemies, that Franco is in bad health. There is no evidence whatever.

He has a notorious dislike of Madrid, and all urban centers. His power seat is the Palace of El Prado, 15 miles to the northwest, where I first interviewed him a full 25 years ago, the first interview he ever gave after the civil war. Also, Franco remains longer now at his Galicia villa on the winding coastal road to remote Meiras. But, like de Gaulle, he has an uncanny ability to play off attacking groups, ruin their positions, and emerge unscathed, and often even stronger. And he will note to you with some irony that in this country of fiery temperaments famous for its bull-ringing call of "Mata! Mata!"—"Kill him! Kill him!"—he moves much more freely and exposed than does President Johnson in the United States.

Franco's claim to constitutional legitimacy rests on a national referendum of July, 1947. It "approved" in overwhelming majority his designation as lifelong ruler ("By the Grace of God, Caudillo of Spain"), the abolition of Spain's republican form of government, inherited from 1831, and the restoration of a monarchy—but without a king.

Spain is thus a constitutional monarchy, with Franco holding the power to designate a king to succeed him. But, like de Gaulle, Franco loves power. He is also in the traditional pattern of the Spanish general whose ambition is to save his country by becoming its ruler.

No, I think Franco will try to stay in command as long as he is alive and then be buried as chief of state at the incredible tomb complex called the Valley of the Fallen, with its great bronze doors of 11 tons each and its huge granite cross a football-field high, expressing the soul of Spain, beautiful and severe.

The Senator, who also sent a letter to Atty. Gen. Ramsey Clark, explained what Congress had in mind when it provided that the import controls on guns would not go into effect until six months after the bill was signed.

"It was the intention of Congress to allow for the establishment of necessary machinery for the enforcement of the provisions of title 4 (the gun control section) of the Anti-Crime Bill," he said.

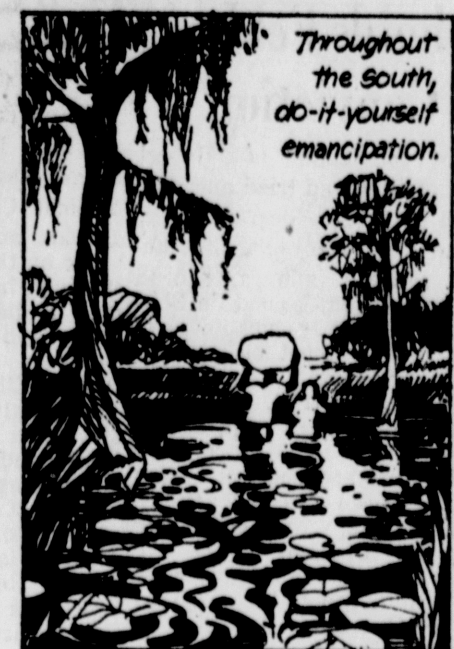

"It certainly was never the intention of Congress to give a six months' grace period to importers so they could dump millions of these weapons into the country."

Dodd said he thought the President would agree that this will not "promote the safety and welfare of our cities."

THE LAST AMERICAN

by Don Oakley and John Lane

5 Came a Revolution

It always appeared a most iniquitous scheme to me to fight ourselves for what we are daily robbing and plundering from those who have as good a right to freedom as we have.

—Abigail Adams

By the middle of the 18th century, slavery was firmly established in America, legal in every colony. That the Negro was an inferior being ordained by God to serve the white man was considered as immutable a law of nature as the law of gravity.

But "Nature and Nature's God" were beginning to speak of other things to men—of certain self-evident truths, certain inalienable rights.

Ironically, as the desire for self-government and political freedom began to stir the hearts of white men, it was a black man who became the first martyr in the struggle to win that freedom.

Crispus Attucks, a self-liberated slave who led a mob that harassed British troops in Boston in March 1770, was the first to fall in that "Boston Massacre."

Negroes were with the Minutemen at Lexington and Concord in April 1775. Negroes participated in Ethan Allen's capture of Ft. Ticonderoga in May. Two Negroes, Peter Salem and Salem Poor, were outstanding heroes at the Battle of Bunker Hill in June.

Then, taking command of the Army and fearing that Negroes might point their muskets in the wrong direction, George Washington issued an order barring them. The Continental Congress passed a confirming resolution.

But a proclamation by the royal governor of Virginia promising freedom for Negroes who joined the British alarmed the colonists. In January 1776, Congress authorized the enlistment of free Negroes. By the time the American cause had reached its lowest point, at Valley Forge in 1777, both slave and free Negroes were welcomed.

In all, some 5,000 of them fought in the Revolution, on land and sea and in nearly every battle, most of them in integrated units.

The spirit of liberty was infectious. Tens of thousands of slaves fled their masters. For a time, it seemed as if the stirring words of the Declaration of Independence about "all men" might really come to mean all men. In 1777, Vermont abolished slavery, and in the next decade most of the North followed.

But it was not to be. The darkest days of slavery in America were yet to come.

Ky Sees Invasion Try Possible Against North

By DANIEL SOUTHERLAND
SAIGON (UPI)—South Vietnam might invade North Vietnam. Sen. Eugene J. McCarthy, if elected president, would not pull U.S. forces from Vietnam. Between puffs on a cigarette came the thoughts, fears and hopes of Nguyen Cao Ky.

In an exclusive weekend interview with United Press International, the South Vietnamese vice president scorned plots to overthrow President Nguyen Van Thieu. He predicted another Viet Cong assault on Saigon within two months. He looked forward to being a gentleman farmer.

"When we talk about marching north, we are serious. For the time being, it is not possible. But later nobody can prevent us from reuniting our country, maybe by military means, maybe by other means. Maybe we will try 'one man, one vote.'"

"If we can make South Vietnam prosperous, in a competitive vote I don't think the north can win... I don't think communism is the ideal for most Vietnamese," he said.

Discusses Candidates

He talked of Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey, former Vice President Richard M. Nixon, McCarthy and other Americans running for the presidency.

"Humphrey and Nixon are both nice men. They are good speakers. I don't know Mr. McCarthy. His policy, you know I can't agree with. But I don't think any future president of the United States will choose an easy solution or a withdrawal or a pullout." of Vietnam.

"China is the real source of trouble in this part of the world. Someday you will have to face Red China. It is better that you face China right now than when they have intercontinental missiles and H-bombs... co-existence with Red China is impossible unless you hand them most of Asia."

Ky scorned more or less frequent reports he thinks of overthrowing Thieu. The persons who talk of such reports, he said, "still believe and see in my image, what do you call it? Captain Midnight."

The 37-year-old former vice air marshal once wore black flying clothes and packed a pistol. "The so-called Thieu-Ky split is now past."

Avoid Divisive Action

"If we have an internal fight now, only the Communists will profit. I will do everything to stop the Communists," he said. On other topics, he said:

—Saigon: The Communists will in the next two months launch "a big and decisive attack" against Saigon and its surrounding area. "Militarily, I have no doubt we will win. But I am concerned about the political side of the battle."

—A peace settlement: It would take a long time because there has been "too much bloodshed. You need time for cooling off. If North Vietnam wants peace, the primary condition is that they must withdraw their troops. We'll solve the problems of South Vietnam very easily then."

—Laos: Air power is not enough to cut the Communist Ho Chi Minh Trail through neighboring Laos. Ky said he proposed a troop drop of his men on the trail in Laos. U.S. commanders "couldn't disagree from a military standpoint but they argued it wouldn't work politically."

Peking's Nuclear Power May Be Help to Peace

By RICHARD M. HARNETT
STANFORD, Calif. (UPI)—By 1972 Communist China will be deploying nuclear armed missiles targeted on U.S. cities, a detailed study for the government indicates.

Paradoxically, this nuclear war capability might reduce the chances of a confrontation, according to the report, prepared by a group of leading China experts.

A draft of the unpublished report has been circulated among government officials and was made available to UPI. It was prepared by a 13-member team of researchers at the Hoover Institution on War, Revolution and Peace at Stanford University for the U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency.

The group included top ranking experts on the military, political and economic affairs of Red China. Dr. Yuan-li Wu, author of a number of books on the Chinese economy, was the project director.

A "high feasibility scenario" was drawn portraying the likely course of events in China between now and 1976. Highlights of the picture include:

—A new attempt at a "great leap forward" beginning in 1969 and ending in 1972 in a "shambles."

—The downfall of Mao Tse-tung in 1972 and a switch to milder, bureaucratic government.

—Concentration on building intercontinental missiles armed with "dirty" nuclear warheads. Little progress in air and ground forces.

—Development of a fleet of submarines that could be posted with nuclear missiles off Hawaii and the U.S. mainland.

—Willingness by China's leaders to enter into arms control agreements that do not limit her own nuclear plans.

—Continuing support of worldwide wars of "national liberation" and continued hostility toward the United States and the Soviet Union.

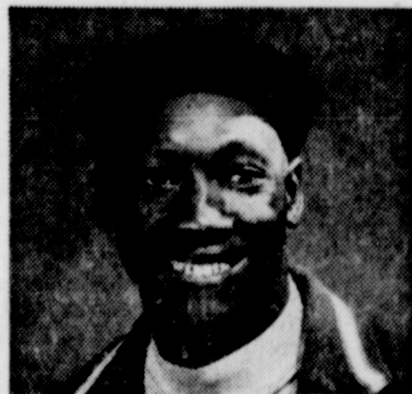

The experts said the capability of waging nuclear war against U.S. cities will persuade the Chinese that they are safe from attack. Thus, they may be willing to agree to some arms control steps such as a "no first use" pact with neighboring countries.

First Heart Transplant Listed in Eastern Europe

BRATISLAVA, Czechoslovakia (UPI)—The first heart transplant operation in Eastern Europe was performed today on a 50-year-old woman by a team of doctors in Bratislava, Radio Bratislava reported.

The report said the heart donor was a 40-year-old man who suffered fatal injuries when he fell from an apartment building. The man had sustained head injuries beyond medical help, it said.

The heart recipient and the donor were not further identified in the report. According to Radio Bratislava the transplant operation began at 9 o'clock this morning. There was no specific mention that it had ended at the time of the broadcast.

The station interrupted a musical program to broadcast an interview with Dr. Wladimir Haviar, apparently a member of the heart transplant team.

Haviar said he himself selected the recipient of the heart. He told listeners in the Bratislava area that a heart transplant had been planned in the city for two months but that three patients selected for the operations died before a donor could be found.

Bratislava is the capital of Slovakia.

There was no immediate confirmation of the transplant operation from other sources.

The operation would be the 25th in the world.

Living heart transplant patients include a man in Cape Town, South Africa; three men in Houston; a woman in Valparaiso, Chile; a man in Montreal and a priest in Paris. Most famous of these is Dr. Philip Blaiberg, 59, in Cape Town, who weakened last weekend to the point where surgeons considered another heart transplant—and possibly a lung transplant—for him. The plan was discarded as Blaiberg rallied from lung and liver ailments.

Playgrounds Hold Checker Championship

The Kingston Parks Checker Championships, the first city-wide tournament sponsored by the Kingston Recreation Department, was held recently at Hutton Park with boys and girls from each of the seven city playgrounds participating.

The tournament represented the culmination of a week of playoff contests in each park, with the winner in the four age groups meeting at Hutton on Friday to determine the city champion. The city-wide tournament winners in each category were: Junior Boys, Richard Sicker, Cornell Park; Junior Girls, Donnyelle Crespin, Hutton Park; Senior Boys, Mike Sass, Block Park; and Senior Girls, Holly Effer, Block Park.

Andrew Murphy III, Superintendent of the Parks and Recreation Commission, has announced that a different tournament will be held each week, with the winners from each park meeting at Hutton for the championship. The tournaments are opened to all youngsters registered in the Recreation Department's summer program.

There was no immediate confirmation of the transplant operation from other sources.

The operation would be the 25th in the world.

Appeals Court Upholds Feldt '65 Conviction

The conviction of Robert Feldt of Highland tried and convicted of first degree rape, second degree assault, first degree sodomy and a second count of assault, second, in February 1965, was upheld last week in the Court of Appeals in Albany.

In 1965 after trial, Feldt was found guilty of all four counts and sentenced to 15 to 20 years on the rape and sodomy counts and 2½ to 5 years on each assault charge. The conviction was later affirmed by the Appellate Division in Albany with permission granted to appeal to the Court of Appeals by Judge Adrian Burke on Oct. 7, 1966.

The matter was argued by District Attorney Joseph Torraca and on July 1, this year the conviction was upheld. Assistant District Attorney Frank Vogt tried the case originally in County Court and argued the matter in the Appellate Division. The appellant was represented by Henry Rothblatt.

Missing Boy Found

Search by state police and volunteers for a 10-year-old Bronx boy, who was missing in a wooded area near Summitville in Sullivan county since Monday afternoon, ended today when the boy walked out of the woods about 2½ miles from Camp Fordham where he had been staying. Troopers used bull horns to call out the name of the missing boy, Frank Spola during the night. He told searchers that he went for a walk and got lost. Troopers said the boy was none the worse for his experience.

Driver Arrested

A Brooklyn man was arrested on the Thruway in the Town of Saugerties Monday night and charged with driving a motor vehicle while intoxicated after he reportedly made U turns on the superhighway. State Trooper J. B. Fox booked Robert H. Baker, 56, of 236 East 23rd Street. The summons is returnable Wednesday at 7 p. m. in the Saugerties Town court. Baker's wife, Frances J. Baker, was charged with public intoxication, troopers said. Both were released in bail of $50 pending disposition of the charges.

Pays $50 Fine

John Mulcahy, 27, of Leeds, escaped serious injury Monday when his car went out of control and slammed into a tree, coming to a stop in a field. Troopers said the man was driving from a driveway at the time of the mishap. He was cited for reckless driving and later paid a $50 fine before Catskill Town Justice Frank Carl, troopers said.

Former Nun Speaks

By DONALD BERNIS

ST. LOUIS, Mo. (UPI)—Jacqueline Grennan still shakes up the world she lives in. She believes in living "on the brink."

Some 18 months ago she was a Roman Catholic nun. As the outspoken young president of Webster College, a small but prestigious Catholic college for girls in a fashionable suburb, she was a well-publicized symbol of a new breed—the nun who seeks to excel in the world as well as in the cloister.

Then Sister Jacqueline shocked many Catholics by announcing she was leaving the Sisters of Loretto.

"The religious habit," she explained, "is an anachronism to one who operates in the market place and the public forum as I do all the time."

Other nuns have left their religious orders and drifted into obscurity. But obscurity is not Jacqueline Grennan's natural habitat.

Severs School Ties

She not only stayed as president of Webster, but worked successfully to sever the school's connections with the Catholic Church and to turn it into a private coeducational college.

Two women in Southern California wrote her she was the "daughter of Bezelel" (in the Gospels, the prince of devils).

"They were well-intentioned ladies," Miss Grennan says now. "In their opinion I was destroying the fabric of everything they believed in."

"The attitude of most Catholics was, 'Why doesn't someone make her keep still?'"

The furor died slowly. The legal change was made to convert Webster into a private, non-sectarian college. Some other Sisters of Loretto followed.

JUSTINE GITTINGS, wife of Richard C. Gittings, 17 Rocky Hill Road, New Paltz, was awarded the Bachelor of Science degree cum laude from State University College, New Paltz, at commencement exercises on June 9. A dean's list student, Mrs. Gittings was awarded scholastic scholarships during her sophomore, junior, and senior years, and is a member of Kappa Delta Pi honor society. A 1950 graduate of Kingston High School, Mrs. Gittings will begin studies for a Master's degree in education this September at New Paltz. Mrs. Gittings is the mother of four children: Richard, William, Collins, and Suzanne. Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Van Bramer, reside at 16 South Road, Mt. Marion.

Sister Jacqueline out of the order and continued to teach at the school. The new lay board of trustees retained nuns who did not wish to leave their order but wanted to continue to teach at Webster.

Miss Grennan still sits in the president's chair. She is more the symbol of a new breed than ever and the demands on her time for speeches and other outside engagements are greater. She has written a book, entitled "Where I Am Going," which is a collection of some of her essays and speeches.

No Regrets

She claims no regrets. "I don't mind disagreement or controversy because it's healthy," she said.

"You have to live on the brink. You have to go for broke to have a sense of fulfillment."

"We're so tough on failure in this country that we break the will to try. Orlando Cepeda strikes out, but we Cardinal fans put up with it because we know he's going to hit home runs."

She is grateful for the opportunity to publish her book because "I've been quoted so much—in and out of context." "I think that persons have a right to my own view, not an oblique or distorted view," she said. "The theme of the book is evolutionary: life goes on."

"I do think that I've been lucky and blessed by the people who have loved me. I think that there is more love now between myself and those nuns at Webster who remained Sisters of Loretto than there is in some religious communities."

Miss Grennan has nudged past her 40th birthday, but she could be mistaken for a Webster coed bouncing across campus. Her pleasantly curved figure, shielded for 21 years by the floor-length black habit of the Sisters of Loretto, now favors fashions which could be purchased in a junior miss shop.

Frank and Sincere
The president of Webster has a quick smile and large, soft eyes that twinkle as she talks. Her words come rapidly, and their meaning is frank and sincere.

Wedding Announced
Miss Leslie Sanford, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Sanford of Kingston, became the bride of Robert Pedrick of Woodstock on Saturday, June 29, at Old Dutch Church, Kingston.

The Rev. Arthur E. Oudemool officiated at the ceremony. The bride, a graduate of Kingston High School, is employed as staff artist and secretary at CTA Public Relations Inc. in Kingston. Her husband, an alumnus of the University of Pennsylvania, is employed by Herbert P. Mayer, Architect, in Kingston.

West Shokan News

WEST SHOKAN—Henry J. Gebelein celebrated his 81st birthday at home of his daughter, Catherine H. Carlson of Shokan June 16. Celebrating with him at the time were his great-grandchildren, Richard and Leif Carlson. Mr. Gebelein was a patient at Kingston Hospital and at New Paltz Nursing Home for the past several months and is now fully recovered.

The recent flooding rain deluged the heavy stand of hay cut on the Head Acres Estate by the Glen Marlatt interests. The fields of baled hay on the Alton Davis farm in Olivebridge were also soaked.

Mr. and Mrs. Virgil H. Winchell of West Hurley were Westside callers last Wednesday.

John Crispell of Olivebridge, Dept. of Water Supply truck driver is a patient at Benedictine Hospital recovering from a heart seizure.

Mr. and Mrs. Marcel Maier visited at the home of her mother, Mrs. Bertha Shimer Tuesday night.

Raymond Kelder, local strawberry and vegetable grower reports the strawberry crop is in unusually short supply and priced accordingly.

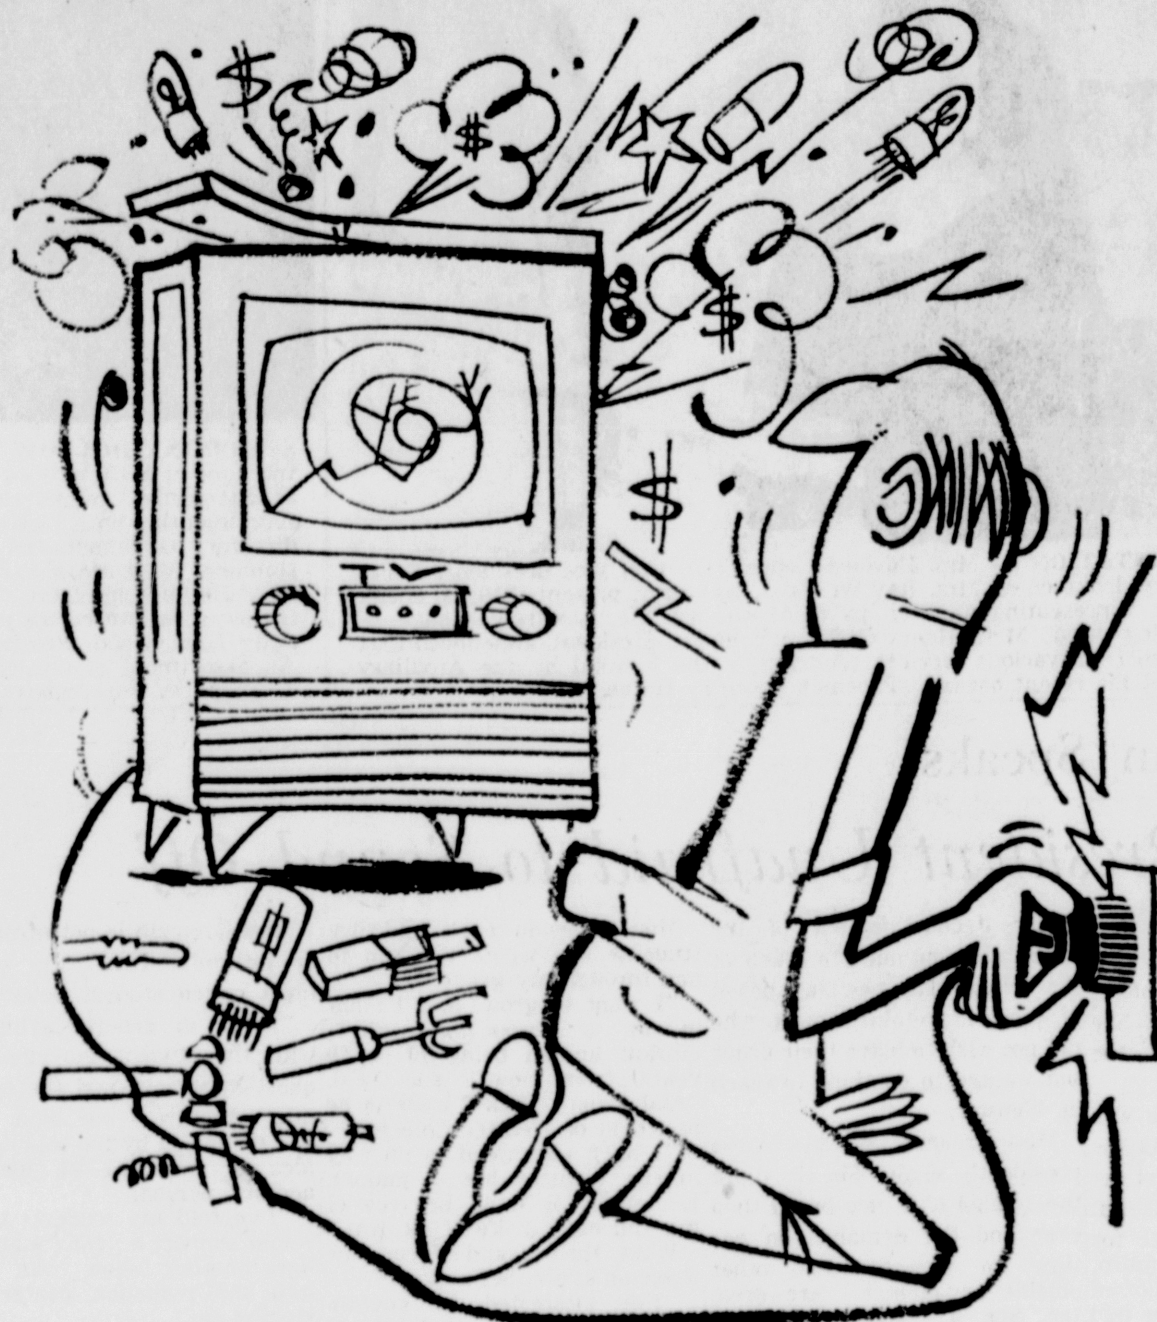

Mrs. Mary Ellen Winchell of McMullin Road returned home Sunday after a week's stay in Benedictine Hospital where she was being treated for an infection. Mrs. Winchell, now 84, is a lifelong Broedhead community resident. She is the mother of Orrie Lyons now retired from the Department of Water Supply maintenance force.

Dr. David Davis, retired, of Ada, Mich., accompanied by his wife, made a surprise visit to Elwyn C. Davis Saturday morning. He is compiling a genealogical history of the Davis family. They also visited the area cemeteries and viewed the site of the Revolutionary War fortress at Mt. Tremper. Dr. Davis was a practitioner for 30 years in Grand Rapids, Mich. and a World War I veteran. He served as a colonel for 3½ years in the Medical Corps.

DON'T DO IT YOURSELF

UNLESS YOU KNOW WHAT YOU'RE DOING

Last year accidents in the home injured over four and a half million Americans and killed more than twenty eight thousand. This year the total will be even higher. These local businessmen are concerned about these frightening figures and remind you to be careful so you don't become a statistic.

Dirty Dozen Club Award to Bob Joyet

Honor Freeman Sports Editor With Scholarship for Soccer

A group of Kingston area soccer buffs who call themselves "The Dirty Dozen" has announced plans to award an annual scholarship to a worthy high school soccer player.

The award, which is worth $250 in cash, will be given in the name of Charles J. Tiano, Freeman Sports Editor.

Winner of the 1968 scholarship is Robert Joyet of Ulster Park, a member of Kingston High's first varsity soccer squad. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Andre Joyet.

Under the terms of the scholarship, the student must have excelled in the sport of soccer, been a good student and planning to enter a four-year college. Joyet plans to enter Northeastern University in Boston in September.

The Dirty Dozen group was formed in December, 1967, primarily for social purposes, but later the membership decided to promote good will and develop interest in the sport of soccer. Several of the group are members of the Kingston Sport Club, sponsors of the Kingston entry in the German-American Soccer Association.

The club has no president but through one of its spokesmen, William (Bill) Oehler, proprietor of Oehler's Mountain Lodge, home base of the Kingston Kickers, elaborated on the scholarship.

"The Dirty Dozen is happy to award its first annual scholarship in honor of Charlie Tiano, the Freeman sports editor."

"He has worked hard to promote the sport and the outstanding coverage given by the Freeman has been responsible for the increasing interest in soccer in our area," Oehler added.

Members of The Dirty Dozen, in addition to Oehler are: Gerard Ansoorge and Winnie Sod-mann of Poughkeepsie; Luis

Leon, Port Jervis; Fritz Weber

and Walt Grasmier, Kingston;

Jim Reinhardt, Bloomington;

Timo Liekoski, New Paltz; Patrick Graham, Shokan; Robert

Samitsch, West Park; Walter

Darbin, Highland; and Royal

Janson, Woodstock.

Glasco, Boo's in Overtime Wins

SPORTS — GLASCO, BOO'S — HD —

It was a wild and woolly show in the Saugerties Softball League last night. Two games were on tap, one each in the Yankee and Met Divisions, and both went into overtime. The result — standings in both divisions were shuffled, putting a new leader on top in the Yankee division and tightening up the Met standings.

The Met contest found Boo's moving to within a half-game of the top rung by taking a 12-inning, 7-6 win over A. J. Scarselli's and in the Yankee clash, Glasco A.C. replaced South Side Men's Club as the front-runner by beating the Men's Club, 4-3 in 11 frames.

It was the loss of control in those final stanzas that produced the wins. Scarselli's pitcher, Tom Carpino gave up a lead-off triple in the 12th, then wild pitched the run across.

South Side's hurler, John Freigh, allowed a double in the 11th, then walked the bases full, got the next two batters, but forced in the winning tally by tossing four straight balls for a walk.

Don Minkler, Boo's rightfielder, led off the 12th with a triple, and raced home with the victory when Carpino wild pitched. It was Minkler's first hit, but he scored twice prior to pace the winners.

Boo's, down 2-0 going to the bottom of the third, got five off Carpino to forge ahead. Two of those runs came with two outs on a bases-loaded missed third strike.

A two-run homer by Don Simmons in the sixth and a two-out, RBI single by Steve DePoala in the seventh sent it into extra innings.

The Yankee game saw Leroy Lasher lead off the 11th with a double, his fourth hit of the game. Intentional walks filled the sacks, South Side figuring it could cut off all runs at the plate. A pair of infield popups made the strategy look great—for a while at least. When Freigh walked Gabe DePoala on four straight pitches, the top two teams did a reversal, Glasco taking over the league lead and South Side dropping to second.

A first inning walk, a sacrifice and Bob Mignano's safety put South Side ahead. Leroy Lasher's homer knotted it in the fourth.

It was see-saw all the way, right down to the last out in the seventh. Angelo Castillo of South Side singled through the infield to knot the score at 3-all and send it overtime.

Bank Chiefs Deny Charge That Powers Dangerous

WASHINGTON (AP) — Banking leaders deny charges in a congressional study that the power of some of the nation's commercial banks is now snowballing dangerously.

"Exaggerations, half-truths and ridiculous conclusions," said a spokesman for Cleveland Trust.

Antitrust Question

Subcommittee Chairman Wright Patman, D-Tex., asked Atty. Gen. Ramsey Clark to look into possible antitrust questions raised by the study, which was compiled by the panel's staff but has not yet been formally adopted.

"The American economy of today is in the greatest danger of being dominated by a handful of corporations in a single industry as it has been since the great money trusts of the early 1900s," Patman said.

"A few banking institutions are in a position to exercise significance, and perhaps eventual control over some of the largest business enterprises in the nation," he added.

Main thrust of the study was its contention that banks' influence is exerted largely through the estimated $607 billion assets which banks hold as trustees for pension funds, foundations, private trusts and other actual owners.

State Demos Bid Rocky Speed Up Choice

WASHINGTON (AP) — Five of New York State's Democratic congressmen have appealed jointly to Republican Gov. Rockefeller to speed his designation of a successor to the late Sen. Robert F. Kennedy.

The Senate soon will consider several appropriations bills "dealing with the urban crisis about which you have expressed such great concern," they said Monday in a letter to the New York governor.

They also cited measures concerning foreign aid, tariffs, education and health.

"You cannot in good conscience deny to more than 12 million New Yorkers representation on these matters," the congressmen said.

The five are Reps. Otis G. Pike of Riverhead, Lester L. Wolff of Great Neck, Jonathan B. Bingham and James M. Scheuer, both of the Bronx, and Richard L. Ottinger of Pleasantville.

They added that they hoped the successor would be a man willing to carry out "ideas and ideals" espoused by Kennedy. Rockefeller is not expected to fill the vacant seat until after the Republican National Convention next month.

Driver to Appear

Charged with driving a truck with inadequate brakes as the aftermath of a fatal traffic accident, Richard Forbes, of Ellenville, is scheduled to appear before Police Justice Ronald Elias in that community on July 16. Police said Forbes was the driver of a truck which spilled its cargo of 12 tons of brick on 4-year-old Valerie Regan who was crushed to death by the bricks as she was standing alongside Canal Street with two other girls on June 17.

Officers of the Bank of America in San Francisco, the country's largest bank, were not available for comment. But the spokesman for Cleveland Trust, one of the banks studied by the subcommittee, said "banks traditionally have had large boards of directors representing major elements of a community's business."

"To avoid interlocks you would have to elect directors with no business experience or connections whatsoever. This would not be in the best interests of anyone."

Attends Parley

Ernest Kidd, presiding minister of the local congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses headed a delegation of the Good News for All Nations Watchtower District Convention in Lewiston, Me.

An unexpected 6,225 persons crowded Lewiston Memorial Armory and High School at the Sunday afternoon session. Closed-circuit television served those in overflow areas while hundreds more sat on the lawns outside and heard the program over loud-speakers.

The occasion was the Bible discourse, Man's Rule About Give Way to God's Rule, by Nathan H. Knorr, president of the worldwide Watchtower organization.

Doctors Are Divided On Blaiberg Case

CAPE TOWN (UPI)—Dr. Philip Blaiberg's doctors disagreed sharply on how to save the world's longest surviving heart transplant patient from serious lung and liver complications, medical sources said today.

The argument over whether to perform still another transplant or to give Blaiberg an anti-rejection drug became so intense, these sources said, that "Blaiberg the man had been forgotten."

The 53-year-old retired dentist showed continued improvement Monday and asked for steak and eggs. Doctors attributed his recovery to an anti-lymphocyte serum imported from Europe. Another transplant was ruled out.

"Dr. Blaiberg's progress continues," Groote Schuur Hospital said in a bulletin Monday night. "Both the lung complication and the hepatitis show further evidence of improvement. The patient is much more cheerful."

The controversy over how to treat Blaiberg involved Dr. Christiaan Barnard, the pioneer to save the patient was to perform another transplant, the medical sources said. Schire, described as "a conservative down to the bootstraps," recommended the drug.

Dear Abby

Tell Sailor to Get Lost!

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am a divorced woman, mid-forties, attractive (so I'm told), and my hobby is boating.

Let me explain. I am not madly mad - hunting as I have a pretty good social life, although I have no one special at the moment.

My problem is a joker whose boat is tied up next to mine in the marina. He is in his early fifties, very attractive, and also divorced. He does a lot of entertaining on his boat. He is always very friendly when he sees me, but the only time I ever hear from him is when he wants to BORROW something. (He's borrowed everything from fishing gear to a fifth of vodka.) He always pays me back, but this is what bugs me:

He asked if he could borrow my boat for a night as he was entertaining a "lady" and wanted to try out my new navigation equipment! Now, what would YOU have told him?

SUNDAY SAILOR
DEAR SAILOR: I would have boxed his compass and told him to get lost.

DEAR ABBY: All my life my parents have raised me to be courteous and to respect my elders. This is getting harder every day. I will give you an example.

Last week I went to a baseball game with two of my friends. They left their seats in the stadium for a few moments and while they were gone a man about my father's age started to move in and signaled another man to come join him. I told him those seats belonged to my friends who would be back any moment. He said he would move when my friends returned.

DEAR ABBY: When my husband died eight months ago, a very nice looking man attended the funeral. He said he had been a very good friend of my husband. I never saw the man before, but he couldn't have been nicer to me. He kept calling on me to keep me company in my sorrow, and I invited him over for Sunday meals and so on. I will leave out a lot of details because they are rather personal, but here is what I want to get across:

It turned out that this man had never known my husband! He makes a practice of reading the newspapers to find out where funerals are, how old the deceased was, where he lived, the number of children, and some of the lodges he belonged to, etc. Then he calls on the widow to get acquainted, saying he had been a good friend of her husband.

If I hadn't accidentally found out that he did this to other widows, I might have gotten

Well, when my friends came back, this man refused to move. I reminded him that he had given his word, but he said, "Listen, kid, I'm 30 years older than you. You kids go find other seats."

Now wanting to start trouble, my friends left and sat somewhere else.

Now why are kids expected to show respect and be courteous to adults when adults act like this to us?

TEEN-AGER
DEAR TEEN-AGER: Teen-agers complain (and justifiably so) that they are individuals and don't want to be judged by teen-agers who behave in a discreditable manner. The same goes for adults. The men were rude and inconsiderate, but they fortunately do not represent ALL adults. Be fair.

DEAR ABBY: When my husband died eight months ago, a very nice looking man attended the funeral. He said he had been a very good friend of my husband. I never saw the man before, but he couldn't have been nicer to me. He kept calling on me to keep me company in my sorrow, and I invited him over for Sunday meals and so on. I will leave out a lot of details because they are rather personal, but here is what I want to get across:

If I hadn't accidentally found out that he did this to other widows, I might have gotten even more seriously involved than I did. And it would have cost me a lot of money, too. Please print this as a warning to other unsuspecting widows.

Horoscope By SYDNEY OMARR It's In The Stars

By Sydney Omarr
"The wise man controls his destiny... Astrology points the way."

FORECAST FOR WEDNESDAY
JULY 10, 1968

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Get basic obligations out of way early. Later, social activity actually aids where business income is concerned. Means this is combination of work and play, a day which tests your versatility.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): During morning, early afternoon hours you may be busy with correspondence, messages, calls. Later, you get down to basic issues. You can do much to advance ambitions, aims. Have faith.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Responsibilities could conflict with travel desires. Check financial status. Be sure you know the truth about expenses. Member of opposite sex is demanding. Strive for balance.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You can get answer to financial dilemma, but it requires co-operation from mate, partner. Probe deep-go beyond superficial indications. Better to finish than to begin projects.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Tonight, you face issues which you had put off, delayed. Whatever you do, do it with enthusiasm. Make peace with one who opposed your views. Key is being creative and interested.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): What you do today brings almost immediate results. Be sure your actions are positive. Otherwise, you could find the costs exceeding the results. Common sense is your great ally.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Good lunar aspect tonight coincides with romantic interests. Creative endeavors. Some restrictions are lifted. Remember, responsibility goes hand-in-hand with freedom.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Forces become concentrated. Your view narrows to specific goal. Know truth when you encounter it. Means be realistic. Don't be afraid to confront challenge. If thorough, you succeed.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Communications connected with relatives appear to dominate. Exchange ideas. Don't be afraid to speak your mind. Key is to be frank and also considerate.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You receive benefits of efforts, including money. This is a day when you gain satisfaction. Keep balance. Realize you gain what is earned. This is time when you are vindicated.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Cycle moves up. You can safely take initiative. Meet people. State views. Be independent in thought, action. Original methods pay off. Stick to principles. Be unique rather than average.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Be discreet. Get needed rest. Pressures are obvious, but you need not bow to them. One you are close to may be in predicament. Be sympathetic without becoming needlessly involved.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are known by only a few persons. A quiet exterior disguises strong creative urges. Changes on horizon lead to greater expressions.

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Cycle high for AQUARIUS: Special word to LEO: give attention to problems of mate, partner.

By Oswald and James Jacoby
Bea Gale Schenken of New York and Sally Johnson of Westport, Conn., won the Women's Pairs in the Eastern championship with better than 73 per cent game for the two sessions.

You have to be lucky to get that good a score, but you also have to go about making Dame Fortune smile on you.

Bea's four club bid in the sample hand was Gerber. She decided to gamble on a slam if her partner held at least two aces and wanted to be dummy.

Now-if the mayor would consult me about this tariff.

nugatory (NEW-guh-tore-ee) worthless; unimportant
After listening to the personnel director's nugatory statements about hiring procedures, the young trainee was wondering if he could be transferred to a different department.
The short order cook, a man whose nugatory comments about international trade were usually ignored by his customers, was explaining to a waitress his views on local tariffs.

Peter Graves

'Mission' Star—Long Climb

By PETER GRAVES

EDITOR'S NOTE: Peter Graves, after some traumatic experiences, is now established in the CBS hit, "Mission: Impossible," and is at the top of a happy career. Here he tells about some of the difficult times during the long climb, including playing second fiddle to a horse.

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—One of television's favorite parlor games is called "biting the hand that feeds you." It's played by actors and actresses in hit series usually after two or three years of having their stomachs fed and egos massaged.

At this point, the nouveau star suddenly arrives at one or more of the following insights: (1) he has sacrificed his "artistic integrity" for a series which really isn't worthy of his talents; (2) he's "bored" with playing the same role week after week; and (3) he isn't getting nearly the salary or fringe benefits he deserves for "carrying" the show.

He confides in the press, "The truth is I'm ready for bigger things. I should be starring in major movies or playing on Broadway. But that fool I took on as my agent signed me to a long-term contract—I didn't know any better; after all, I was working at a gas station when we met—and now I'm stuck in this rotten show."

The actor who takes this attitude is naive or inexperienced or both, and for his own sake, ought to have some sense pounded into him. Instead, he's apt to suffer a worse fate. The industry just may call his bluff, and he'll find himself back at what high school.

What such performers forget, particularly when they start reading their own publicity, is that landing the lead in a high-rated TV series takes more than talent. It requires luck and timing, and the contribution of directors, writers, cameramen, stage hands and many others.

I can speak from experience. When I stepped off the train in Hollywood 15 years ago, I figured I was ready to storm both movie and TV citadels. After all, at 16, I'd been the youngest radio announcer in the history of station WMIN in Minneapolis and had received glowing notices for "MacBeth" and "Of Mice and Men" at the University of Minnesota.

So what if there were no brass bands or gorgeous starlets to greet me? There was probably a supermarket opening on the other side of town, and all the brass bands and starlets were gathered there.

I set my sights on landing a starring role in a major prime-time TV series. Meanwhile, I was fortunate enough to appear in several movies, including "Stalag 17," "Rogue River," and "The Court Martial of Billy Mitchell."

Horse Had the Lines

Finally, I did get a television series, "Fury." It wasn't exactly prime time (unless you consider Saturday mornings prime time) and while I was nominally the star, a horse had all the good lines. For the next six years, my fan mail came from youngsters, 6 to 10, who figured

I was a lucky guy to get that close to such a smart horse. While the prospect of a hit series remained as elusive and ethereal as the town of Brigadoon, I was busy in movies, television and the Broadway theater, and the Bank of America and I were on excellent terms.

Finally, this past season, it happened. I was contacted by the producers of "Mission: Impossible" and was asked to create the new role of Jim Phelps. After a 15-year wait, I'm obviously delighted. And I find it ironic and a little sad when performers, in other top-rated series, grouse about "artistic suffocation" and publicly call for their own series to fall as a way out of their contractual obligations.

To borrow a phrase from "Mission: Impossible," that's self-destruction. Not the kind that happens when a secret tape goes bang! But the kind that takes place when actor's ego gets bigger than his talent or his good sense.

After downing a martini, he said:

Joe—Shay, you make the best martinis in town and I'm going to give you Ethelbert, my pet lobster.

George (the bartender)—Fine, I'll take him home for dinner.

Rocky Wooing the Missouri Bloc, Reagan Ticket 'Wide Open' Now

By United Press International
Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller of New York campaigned in Nixon territory today, wooing members of the 24-man Missouri delegation to the Republican National Convention.

Beams at Turnout

Rockefeller, beaming at a turnout police estimated totaled 11,000, repeated for the crowds his promise of "new leadership to replace the old politicians" if he is elected president.

In a slight change of position from several weeks ago, Rockefeller said there still was a "wide open" possibility of a ticket with himself as head and Gov. Ronald Reagan of California as the vice presidential candidate.

"I don't think any combination should be ruled out," he said.

Rockefeller had spoken of the suggestion with some coolness in recent weeks.

For his part, Reagan told newsmen in Sacramento that he will become a serious candidate for the top spot on the ticket if he gets a sizeable bloc of votes from other states at the convention. However, he did not detail how much support in addition to California's 86-vote delegation it would take to convince him to make his favorite son candidacy an all-out effort.

Other developments:

George C. Wallace—The former Alabama governor opened a bid for third-party spot on Massachusetts presidential ballot with a day-long series of stops north of Boston. He told enthusiastic crowds the United States should fight to win in Vietnam.

Nixon Defends Membership

Richard M. Nixon—The former vice president defended his membership in the Baltusol Golf Club of Springfield, N.J., which excludes Negroes and

Jews. He said he disapproved of such membership "restrictions" but "it has never been my practice to resign from such clubs but rather to work from within to change the policy." He hosted a cocktail party for the state's 40 GOP national delegates at the club.

Hubert H. Humphrey—The vice president, fighting a case of the flu, appeared briefly in Washington for the opening of a summer youth sports program. In San Diego, William Schnitzler, secretary-treasurer of the AFL-CIO, urged union members to support Humphrey.

Eugene J. McCarthy—Leaders of the late Sen. Robert F. Kennedy's New Jersey campaign organization joined with McCarthy backers in announcing formation of a joint steering committee. They stopped short of endorsing Humphrey's candidacy, but said they would not be able to support Humphrey unless he separates himself from President Johnson's policies.

Harold Stassen—The former Minnesota governor met for 45 minutes with New York Mayor John Lindsay, then angered the mayor by disclosing the meeting to newsmen. Stassen said either he or Lindsay could beat Humphrey in a presidential election, and there "was some chance, granted that it's remote," that one of them would win the GOP nomination. Lindsay is not an announced candidate.

501 in the Nixon Column

WASHINGTON (AP)—With four weeks to go before the Republican National Convention begins, Richard M. Nixon pushed just past the three-quarter mark Monday, in terms of publicly committed delegates, toward a first-ballot nomination for president.

First-Ballot Intentions

In an Associated Press tabulation of first-ballot intentions of the Miami Beach delegates, as dictated by primary results, pledged at the time of election or stated in an AP poll, the former vice president had 501 of the required 667 votes.

The biggest pick-up of the past week was at least 25 Texas delegates who went along when Sen. John G. Tower dropped a favorite son stance and went to Nixon.

New York Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller stood at 192 in the table.

The Republicans had only eight more delegates to pick, in Utah the coming weekend, to fill their 1,333 convention seats.

Backing favorite sons or otherwise at least ostensibly on the fence were 569 delegates, plus 43 outside of California who had picked Gov. Ronald Reagan, that state's favorite son.

677 1/2 for Hubert

In the same tabulation Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey stood at 677 1/2 of the 1,312 needed for first-ballot nomination in the Chicago Democratic Convention opening Aug. 26.

Trailing at 414 was Sen. Eugene J. McCarthy.

Another 15 votes were scattered among various others.

More than half of the total Democratic convention roster of 2,622 was uncommitted in public at that point. That situation was still sharply complicated by the assassination of Sen. Robert F. Kennedy which shifted more than 300 votes from him to the uncommitted category. The bulk of those still had not stated a new choice, thus helping build up the total of 779 1/2 generally uncommitted. The favorite son total was 537 1/2.

The Democrats had just under 100 more votes to allot.

Talk With Lynda LBJ's Clincher

NEW YORK (UPI)—Only hours before he told the nation he would not seek reelection, President Johnson broke the news to Hubert Humphrey and told the vice president he was not sure he could survive another term, according to Look magazine.

The "final clincher," according to an article by Drew Pearson in the magazine's July 22nd issue, was a talk Johnson had that morning with his elder daughter, Lynda Bird Robb. Lynda the day after she saw her husband Chuck Robb off to Vietnam. She spoke of Robb as if he were already dead.

"She was as pale as a ghost," the President said. "She talked to me about what a fine boy Chuck was, in the past tense, as if he was never coming back. And she said, 'Daddy, I want to ask you a question. Why do we have to fight over there when so many people are opposed to the war. Why do we have to send 200 boys over there in Chuck's company when there's so much opposition here at home to the war?"

That night, at 9:40 p. m., Johnson announced his retirement.

Look said Johnson told Humphrey he was stepping down because he didn't think the American people would believe his move for peace unless he did. Then, the magazine said, he added:

"There's another thing. I'm tired. I'm getting old. All the men in my family have a record of not living much over the age of 60. I'll be 60 this summer. I've had a heart attack. My health is pretty good. I think my chart is as good as yours. But I'm not sure I could live out another term. And that's not the way I want to end my life."

The White House declined comment on the Look article.

By ALAN S. BOYD
U.S. Secretary of Transportation

The United States had 97.5 million vehicles registered in 1967 and motorists on our nation's highways traveled 937 billion intercity road miles during that twelve month period.

This exceptional annual pace makes it quite clear why highway safety must become everyone's business.

It is, of course, the most vital business for the driver. He has everything to lose, including his life.

It is also the business of each state, where constant improvement of traffic systems and safety programs is necessary.

And it is, finally, the business of the Federal government where, through the Department of Transportation, we are seeking to encourage better drivers, safer autos and safer traffic and highway systems.

The Department of Transportation, during 1967, issued its first auto safety standards, designed to improve the safety of new motor vehicles. These standards, which require such safety devices as seat belts, collapsible steering columns, etc., already are beginning to have their impact felt.

We believe that these safety devices are saving lives and will continue to save lives.

In 1967 we also issued our first standards for encouraging and assisting, through Federal grants, the improvement of traffic safety programs in all our states.

Safety Up to Driver

These first thirteen standards, which the state legislatures have begun to enact, require such things as periodic motor vehicle inspection, motorcycle helmets, etc.

I cannot emphasize too strongly, however, that no amount of government regulation is going to stop the slaughter on our nation's highways — almost 1,000 traffic deaths per week last year — unless the drivers themselves recognize the need for a greater personal effort toward safer driving.

The number of accidents each year continues to rise at an alarming rate.

The resulting economic losses have reached the phenomenal figure of nearly a billion dollars monthly.

By the end of 1967 it took eight million days of hospitalization merely for the care and treatment of survivors of automobile accidents.

As Dr. William Haddon, director of the National Highway Safety Bureau, has said many times, crashes on highways are not accidents; something made them happen.

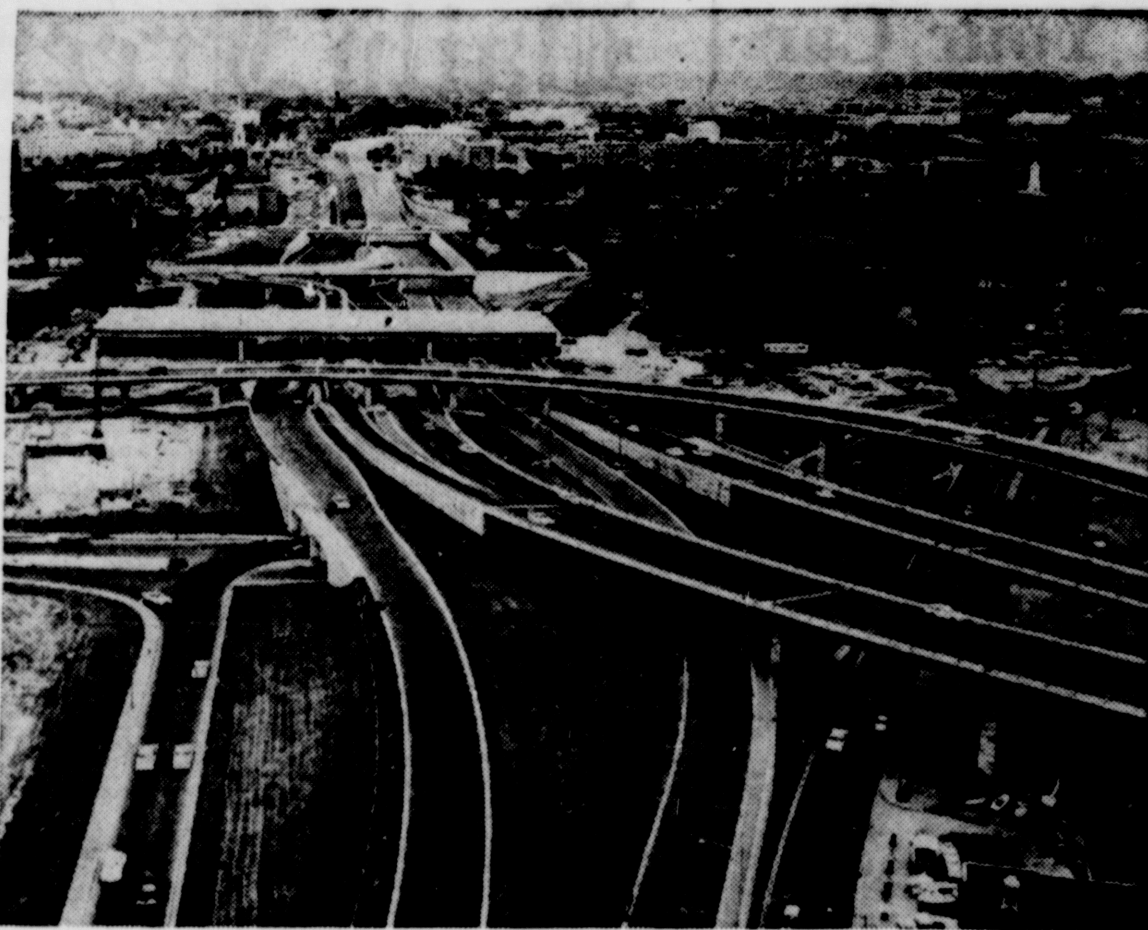

Ready to Compensate

Since crashes will continue to occur in substantial number for the foreseeable future, we are placing strong emphasis on greatly improving the crash design of vehicles, and especially the safety of the passenger section of the family car.

The Department of Transportation is ready to cooperate with all state and local agencies in our drive to make this nation one of the safest in the world.

You can do your part by making safety your primary consideration every time you get behind the wheel of an auto.

And this means, of course, making sure that your auto is safe — as well as your driving habits.

New superhighways like this new Washington, D.C. road can help cut the highway accident toll in the U.S. Limited access roads, both in cities and in rural areas, are safer to travel on than conventional thoroughfares. Also, they take the strain out of driving, cut travel time dramatically.

Safety Is Everyone's Job

By ALAN S. BOYD
U.S. Secretary of Transportation

The United States had 97.5 million vehicles registered in 1967 and motorists on our nation's highways traveled 937 billion intercity road miles during that twelve month period.

This exceptional annual pace makes it quite clear why highway safety must become everyone's business.

It is, of course, the most vital business for the driver. He has everything to lose, including his life.

It is also the business of each state, where constant improvement of traffic systems and safety programs is necessary.

And it is, finally, the business of the Federal government where, through the Department of Transportation, we are seeking to encourage better drivers, safer autos and safer traffic and highway systems.

The Department of Transportation, during 1967, issued its first auto safety standards, designed to improve the safety of new motor vehicles. These standards, which require such safety devices as seat belts, collapsible steering columns, etc., already are beginning to have their impact felt.

We believe that these safety devices are saving lives and will continue to save lives.

In 1967 we also issued our first standards for encouraging and assisting, through Federal grants, the improvement of traffic safety programs in all our states.

Safety Up to Driver

These first thirteen standards, which the state legislatures have begun to enact, require such things as periodic motor vehicle inspection, motorcycle helmets, etc.

I cannot emphasize too strongly, however, that no amount of government regulation is going to stop the slaughter on our nation's highways — almost 1,000 traffic deaths per week last year — unless the drivers themselves recognize the need for a greater personal effort toward safer driving.

The number of accidents each year continues to rise at an alarming rate.

The resulting economic losses have reached the phenomenal figure of nearly a billion dollars monthly.

By the end of 1967 it took eight million days of hospitalization merely for the care and treatment of survivors of automobile accidents.

As Dr. William Haddon, director of the National Highway Safety Bureau, has said many times, crashes on highways are not accidents: something made them happen.

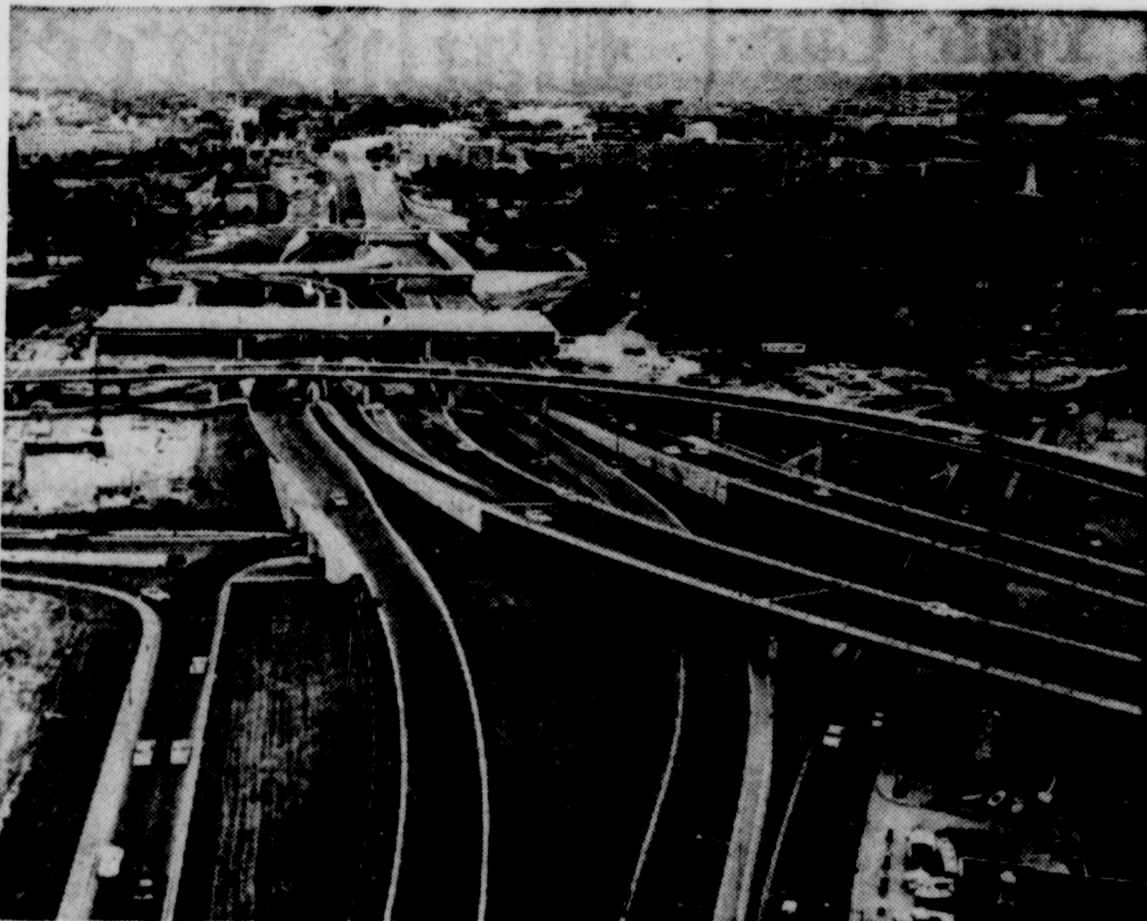

Ready to Compensate

Since crashes will continue to occur in substantial number for the foreseeable future, we are placing strong emphasis on greatly improving the crash design of vehicles, and especially the safety of the passenger section of the family car.

The Department of Transportation is ready to cooperate with all state and local agencies in our drive to make this nation one of the safest in the world.

You can do your part by making safety your primary consideration every time you get behind the wheel of an auto.

And this means, of course, making sure that your auto is safe — as well as your driving habits.

New superhighways like this new Washington, D.C. road can help cut the highway accident toll in the U.S. Limited access roads, both in cities and in rural areas, are safer to travel on than conventional thoroughfares. Also, they take the strain out of driving, cut travel time dramatically.

Alan S. Boyd

The Automobile: 4-Wheel Freedom

When this nation's founders issued their call for freedom across the land, there was one freedom whose existence was beyond their most vivid visions. That freedom was the freedom of movement which was not really possible until this century.

Thanks to the development of the automobile, this freedom of movement has been a true liberation for the great majority of Americans.

With it, the confines of neighborhoods and communities gave way to unlimited access to all parts of our nation.

Business trips, vacation journeys to anywhere a road will take you have widened our activities, increased our pleasure.

Equally liberating has been the development of the automobile itself. From capricious, "Get-out-and-get-under" transportation of 50 years ago, the car has become so dependable that even the most delicate woman can drive anywhere with certainty.

How important a factor the automobile has become in America can be shown by a few startling statistics.

13 Million Employed

According to the Automobile Manufacturers Association, nearly 13 million people are employed in the manufacture, distribution, maintenance and commercial use of the car.

One out of every six businesses is directly dependent on making, distributing and servicing automobiles. In fact, well over a half million enterprises are automotive, accounting for 5 per cent of all retail sales.

Yet these statistics don't begin to show the immense impact the car has on all our lives.

Eight out of ten families own cars and two out of ten own more than one car.

Eighty-two per cent of us depend on cars to take us to work.

Almost 90 per cent of us take vacation trips by car.

Such statistics are irrefutable proof that not only do cars provide us with our living but make that living more meaningful and enjoyable.

A Word of Caution

Yet with the freedom the car has given us, we have not always accepted the responsibility this freedom provides. Too many of us are heedless of the fact that a carelessly driven car can kill or maim.

Too many of us, who are careful drivers, do not pay enough attention to the condition of our cars. This carelessness is a definite, if not precisely measurable, factor in the highway accident picture.

As simple as the car is to operate, it is a complex machine with thousands of working parts. As such, it requires attention of qualified maintenance people.

And all systems of your car need attention to assure safe and dependable operation. It is obvious that a set of tires that is allowed to deteriorate is an obvious threat to safety. It is not as obvious that an untuned engine is a safety menace. It becomes more obvious when one considers that an untuned engine adversely affects safe passing on the road. Also, a car stalled on an expressway, due to ignition failure, is a potential hazard.

While critics of the auto industry have blamed car makers for not paying enough attention to safety, a logical analysis of the problem shows a deeper cause.

The auto makers have not been able to repeal laws of friction, oxidation and other physical and chemical factors that lead to inevitable deterioration of car components.

It is still up to the motorist to match his freedom of movement with responsibilities.

There is the responsibility to others of maintaining a safe car. There is the responsibility to self to protect a large investment by thorough, conscientious car care.

This section is dedicated to greater freedom of movement by helping the reader live up to the important responsibility of car care.

WORLD ALMANAC FACTS

With more than 97 million vehicles on the roads, "drive-ins," offering a variety of services, are becoming more and more a part of the American landscape. The World Almanac notes. The original drive-in was, naturally, the gas station. But it wasn't until 1933, when the first drive-in movie opened in Camden, N.J., that the drive-in idea began to catch on.

Vision Important For Safe Driving

Unlike the myopic millionaire who solved his driving visibility problems by installing prescription windshields, most Americans have to be content with more routine means to see where they're going.

Fortunately, you don't have to be a millionaire or even close to it to maintain maximum good visibility in your car. Yet it's as vital to safe operation as sound brakes and tires.

Chances are every time you stop for gas, the attendant cleans your glass. But he seldom if ever cleans it from the inside. Condensed moisture and tobacco film cling to glass areas, cutting down visibility, especially at night.

Also, evaporation of plastic softeners, used in vinyl upholstery, collects on the interior glass.

Don't Overfill

If you should be adding water to your car's battery be careful not to overfill. Spilled acid will attack metal hold down cables and other parts adjacent to the battery.

To eliminate these hazards, wash the inside of the glass area with a window-cleaning solvent at regular intervals.

Another barrier to good visibility is worn wiper blades. Streaking on the windshield is a sign that the blades need replacement. Also have the tension on the wiper arms checked. Too little tension makes wipers ineffective and the arms may need replacement.

Naturally, a constantly high level of windshield washer fluid is a must. Remind your attendant to check this when he checks your oil.

Luckily for safe operation, it is easy to check the various lights on your car. Burnt out bulbs are easy to spot. However, headlights may be out of alignment without the motorist realizing the fact.

One sign that your headlights may be out of line is having oncoming motorists flash their brights at you. If you know your lights are not on high beam, then your headlights need attention.

Noises Tell Woes of Car

Automobiles can tell you when they need attention — in a colorful language of their own. Here's how to decipher your car's complaints!

Listen, is your car talking to you? No, carburetors can't speak English and your generator never took Spanish lessons.

But the family car does "speak" a language all its own — and can tell you its troubles once you learn to understand this language.

It's your car's way of doing you a favor — warning you that it's time for a service stop before more serious trouble arises.

To help you translate your car's squawks and "backtalk," here's a simplified dictionary of automotive "speech."

Hear a high-pitched, rhythmic chirping like a nestful of hungry robins? It's probably a dry fan belt — an easy matter for your service man to silence.

Once in a while this chirping can be the more serious wail of forgotten generator bearings protesting lack of lubricant. Your mechanic knows how to "feed" your car the oil that will bring soothing relief to your ears.

If your engine misses or idles roughly on a wet morning, you'll probably hear a "snick-snick" noise under the hood; it sounds for all the world like a loud cricket or the breaking of a twig.

This is the sound an electric spark makes when it jumps from a damp spark plug wire to ground on the engine block. Rather than fool around with the wiring yourself, let a trained auto mechanic make sure everything is dry and shipshape — and at the same time have your spark plugs checked.

A startling sound like a woodpecker gone berserk on a metal door, particularly when the engine's cold in the morning, is not an indication of imminent disaster but very likely just a sticky hydraulic valve lifter.

Usually it can be readily silenced by a change to fresh detergent oil and or a special oil additive. However, if your car has solid tappets — and many high-performance automobiles do — an adjustment is probably necessary.

Did you ever toss a handful of BB's down a rainspout? Anyway, you can imagine the racket! If you hear one like it from your engine when accelerating or climbing a hill, you've probably got pre-ignition or spark knock.

The cause can be use of "regular" grade fuel in an engine that's designed for premium, improperly adjusted ignition timing, or deposits of carbon in the engine's combustion chambers that act as unwanted spark plugs.

If you know you're using the correct fuel, better let your service man check into the cause of the knocking. Otherwise you may be wasting gas.

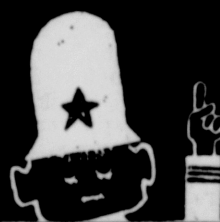

Another bird's chirp — this time beneath the car — can be caused by a dry pinion bearing seal at the rear axle. Prompt servicing can restore peace and quiet.

If, when applying your brakes lightly, you detect the sound of someone scuffing a shoe on a doormat, it could be an out-of-round (slightly oval) brake drum rubbing its high spots on the brake shoes. This is a condition rarely found on a new car, but it's a sure sign of hard wear on a used one.

Keep Car in Good Shape; It Might Save Your Life

A family of three was involved in a highway accident when the driver tried to avoid a stray animal. At 65 mph the car's right wheels moved onto the soft shoulder. The car swerved out of control and struck a tree.

Another car, approaching at about the same speed from the other direction, was forced to drop onto the shoulder but the driver was able to maintain control and bring his car to a safe stop.

While much must be left to conjecture about the true cause of the accident, inspectors concur the car's mechanical condition was a contributory factor. Loose steering parts had prevented the driver from maintaining control. Had the other car's steering been equally worn there might have been a two-car collision.

There has never been an accurate count on the percentage of highway accidents caused at least in part by mechanical failure of the car. Estimates range from under ten per cent to over 50 per cent.

When an emergency arises, the ability to "drive out" of that situation can be the difference between an accident and a scare.

So this becomes a matter of viewpoint: is an accident caused because it is un-prevented? Essentially, yes, say some automotive safety spokesmen. Because the car is an extension of the driver, the driver's ability to avoid an accident may be not better than the car's ability to drive him out of that situation.

It is becoming increasingly apparent that it must be the responsibility of the driver to avoid an accident — even when the situation is created by someone else. The ability to anticipate trouble and avoid it is essential to traffic safety.

There are precious few seconds from the time a driver sees an emergency until his foot depresses the brake pedal. If because of sluggish pedal action it takes another fifth of a second for the brakes to take hold, that car has traveled another car length at 60 mph.

If one tire is excessively soft, the car may pull to one side just a trifle. This then must be corrected by steering slightly in the other direction. Looseness in the steering adds a new element to the problem and may totally eliminate the safety margin.

Still, accident records probably would list this accident as "driver error." While the human element still is primary in accident prevention (or creation) condition of the vehicle may be far more significant than is generally recognized.

L. A. Is Biggest

With close to 3,000,000 passenger cars registered, Los Angeles County leads the nation in number of cars. Only seven other entire states in this country have more cars registered to them than the L.A. area.

Safest Drivers Here

According to the World Health Organization, Americans are the safest drivers on earth. There were 52 deaths per 100 million vehicle miles last year. Japan had the highest toll with 402 deaths per 100 million vehicle miles.

Bad Exhaust Is Dangerous

One of the most common forms of suicide is the inhaling of car exhaust fumes in a closed garage. A very effective killer, one saucerful of pure carbon monoxide is enough to put its victim to sleep forever.

A great deal less than that in a closed car will bring about a headache, nausea and drowsiness; reason enough to keep the exhaust system good and tight. How do you know if your car is exhaust - safe?

You can't tell much from sniffing because carbon monoxide is odorless. There's no mistaking the sound of a blown muffler or leaking exhaust pipe, of course. First a rumble and then a roar, the noise is your signal that you have waited too long to have the system checked. The best way to be sure about the condition of your car's exhaust system is to have it examined by a competent lift. His trained eye can spot a serviceman while the car is on the pinholes and other signs of deterioration which are the tipoff that it's time to replace. If your car has not had a new muffler in the past two years, you can expect to replace it soon. Life expectancy runs between two and three years.

Tires: Driver's Best Friend

Safe tires can mean the difference between life and death for a motorist. Surveys have shown that while tires are involved in only about one per cent of all accidents, in more than half these cases the tires were either bald or badly worn.

A tire inspection can be done quickly and easily by just about any driver, man or woman.

To check tire wear, insert a penny in the center grooves. If you can see the top of Lincoln's head, replace the tire.

The newer tires have tread wear indicators built into them which appear as solid bands across the tread surface.

A tire should also be replaced if it shows tread or sidewall cracks deep enough to expose tire ply cords. Other danger signs include bumps, bulges or knots indicating possible separation of sidewall from tire body. The tire should be removed from the wheel and examined by an expert.

Tire valves should be in good condition and be equipped with valve caps. Also rims or wheels which are bent, loose, cracked or otherwise damaged should be replaced. Also replace missing or defective bolts, nuts and lugs.

Tires, even with the best of care, are eventually going to wear out but the smart motorist can do a number of things to insure maximum, safe wear from his tires.

First of all, tires should be rotated regularly. It is suggested by the Rubber Manufacturers Association that the tires be rotated every 5,000 miles.

When flats occur, the tire should be removed from the wheel as quickly as possible. Even driving on the flat for a short distance can destroy the tire.

Another thing on flats...they must be repaired from the inside. Plugs and blowout patches can be used but it must be remembered that they are only temporary repairs. Aerosol-type sealants are handy but they are only good for up to 100 miles at no more than 50 miles per hour.

Inflation is perhaps the key word on tire maintenance. Underinflation causes extreme flexing of a tire which builds up heat in direct proportion to speed. The critical point is 250 degrees after which tire failure is real danger.

Over inflation causes tires to run hard and subjects them to impact damages and weakening of the carcass. It also causes excessive wear in the center of the tread.

Proper inflation varies with the ply rating of the tire and its load. There is no industry-wide definition of ply but the word ply seems to be on the way out, being replaced by a "load range" system which uses letters.

Load range B is for the 4-ply tires and maximum inflation recommended is 32 pounds. Load Range C is for 6-ply tires with an inflation of 36 pounds and 40 pounds of pressure is advised for load range D which includes 8-ply tires.

Tire pressure should be checked at least once a month when the tires are cool. Tire pressure can fluctuate, however, but this is considered normal. It is not advised to bleed tires. For turnpike driving it is advised to increase tire pressure about four pounds but within the maximum limits.

When replacing tires it is recommended that the same size be put back on. Never a smaller size. New tires should be broken in by keeping speed under 60 miles per hour for the first 50 miles of driving.

Even with the best of tires driving in the rain or in the winter months can be extremely dangerous. Stopping distances on a wet road can be up to four times the distance on a dry road.

A driver should be especially alert when it first begins to rain. Light rain, or drizzle, especially after a dry spell produces a thin greasy film in the road which is almost as slippery as ice.

Speed and rain don't go together. As water accumulates on the road surface tires begin to "hydroplane or surfboard" as speed increases. The car is actually riding on the water, not on the road. Traction, especially at speeds over 40 miles per hour, is practically nonexistent. With snow and ice on the roads the most dangerous temperature is around 32 degrees. It's much safer at zero degrees. Studded tires (although outlawed in some states) are considered the best for winter conditions, up to twice as safe as regular tires.

There are a number of mechanical irregularities that can cause uneven tire wear. For the most part, it costs less to have them corrected than it does for a brand new tire.

Mechanical deficiencies include wheels out of balance, improper toe-in or toe-out, improper camber (wheels tilted excessively inward or outward), faulty or "grabbing brakes" and faulty or worn shock absorbers.

All Too Many

Approximately 40 million cars are being driven with defective ignition systems and worn spark plugs according to a survey which involved 174 cities across the nation.

Cheap Repairs Don't Make Sense

Economizing on car maintenance expenses may be costing you more money than it is saving you.

The average U.S. car owner now spends about $13 monthly to maintain his car. Yet, survey after survey shows most cars today are not running at their best. Also, official inspections show that a sizable number have safety defects, according to George M. Galster, Manager of Champion Spark Plug Company's Automotive Technical Service.

Keeping Car in Mint Condition

"In order to keep a car in mechanically - mint condition at all times, an average expenditure of $19 a month is required," said Mr. Galster. "In more than is now being spent. We arrived at this by pricing out a list of necessary services spread out over five years, the length of warranties on U.S. cars. Figures are based on maintaining a full - sized V-8 sedan in the low price group with automatic transmission.

"Though he'll spend an added $6 a month, in the long run the typical owner should more than recoup the outlay. Money will come back to the owner (a) at trade - in time and (b) in lower operating costs.

How to Get

Best Gas Mileage.

"By driving with an engine always in tune and with good ignition, he'll realize his full gas mileage potential all the time, not just when the car is new. And he'll be able to start in any kind of weather.

"By having the front - end always in good alignment — by rotating the tires regularly, and keeping the wheels balanced, tire life will be extended — up to as much as 20 per cent, which is another source of savings.

"At trade - in time," Mr. Galster said, "allowances for cars in mint condition, according to NADA, average at least $235 more than comparable models in just average or fair condition on the first trade - in. That alone amounts to around four dollars a month rebate for the 60 months of ownership."

These figures, according to Mr. Galster, are the result of a year - long study of car maintenance costs by Champion. More than 50 associations and manufacturers were queried.

"Next to the home, the car represents the largest cash investment the average American makes," he declared. "Only by taking care of that investment on a regular basis can it be protected fully. Waiting until you have a few extra dollars to maintain vital parts is an invitation to premature deterioration at best and a dangerous, accident - inviting situation at worst."

Other reasons were cited for following a program of car care. A cared - for car always will be in prime operating condition, minimizing the chance of sudden breakdown at inconvenient times and places.

Also, new car warranties require adherence to maintenance schedules. By living up to warranty requirements, motorists needn't worry about many expensive repairs during the time specified by the manufacturers. Should the owner decide to keep the car longer than the average time, it would provide dependable transportation years after the final payment.

Keep Tab on Your Brakes

31-KINGSTON DAILY FREEMAN, JULY 9, 1968

Few of us ever have had the unheeded, however, when a follow these three procedures: 1. Test the hydraulic system at least once a week by holding firm pressure on the pedal. If the pedal falls gradually toward the floor, you are losing pressure in one of the wheel cylinders or the master cylinder.

This calls for immediate attention.

2. In a flat, level, open area where you are clear of obstacles, try a hands-off stop at about 30 miles an hour. If the car pulls to one side you may have brake problems. This also may be symptomatic of misaligned wheels or unequal tire inflation, so consider these before you get too deeply involved in brake service. A good mechanic can pinpoint the trouble easily.

3. Have your automotive serviceman perform a complete inspection of the braking system, including linings, drums and hydraulic components at least every six months.

Innocent Battery

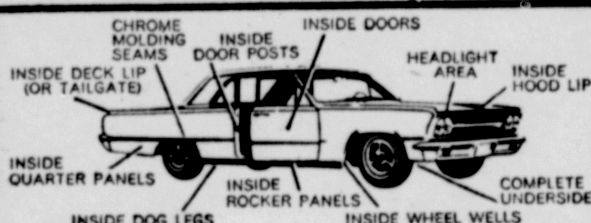

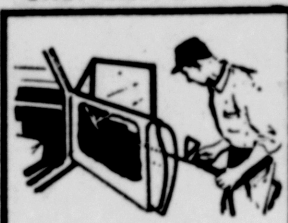

Many starting failures listed as battery failures actually are not. The trouble often is caused by abnormal conditions in the ignition system which causes the battery to become run down while the driver is attempting to get the car started.

Trouble you can't afford.

Worn spark plugs in an untuned engine are trouble. Breakdown trouble. Passing and load-hauling trouble. Gas mileage trouble. Trouble enough to spoil your hard-earned vacation.

It's trouble you can avoid by getting a Champion Tune-Up now. Here's how we know.

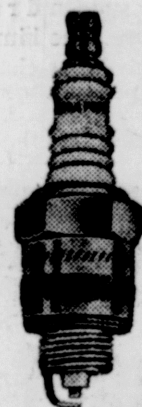

We tested hundreds of cars including Chevrolets, Fords, Plymouths, Ramblers and other makes that had gone over 10,000 miles without a tune-up. Each of these cars was given a Champion Tune-Up (a new set of Champion spark plugs plus any other basic tune-up items needed). The U.S. Auto Club certified the test results.

The results were just what you'd want. Increased power for safer passing and an average gas savings of over a gallon per tankful.

But the most important thing for you to remember is that a well tuned car assures you of dependable, trouble-free motoring this summer.

Why risk summer driving trouble. Get a Champion Tune-Up at least once a year or every 10,000 miles.

Champion spark plugs meet or exceed warranty requirements of all vehicle and engine manufacturers.
